President To Deliver 3 War Talks In Week

Broadcasts Scheduled Aug. 31, Sept. 3, 7; Harsh Sacrifices Will be Outlined

Answering Critics

Washington Bureau at Chicago 24c

President Roosevelt decided yesterday to go directly to the people with three major radio addresses during the week August 31-September 7 to drive home the full import of the war and to outline the harsh sacrifices ahead.

The three speeches in a single week are almost without precedent in anything but an election year.

Here is the schedule of addresses: August 31—A speech commemorating the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Navy's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

September 3—An address to the assembly of the International Student Service and through that organization to youth of the United Nations and of occupied and enemy nations.

September 7—A major address, presenting America with the new program to check the mounting cost of living, stabilize wages and farm prices and exercise rigorous controls over taxes, credits, savings and spending.

President's Reply to Critics

The announcement by White House Secretary Stephen T. Early was viewed as Mr. Roosevelt's answer to some criticism that he has been losing his intimate contact with the American people at a critical moment. These three addresses are expected to give him an opportunity to review the war in its complete aspects, economic and to domestic as well as military, and to outline specifically for the youth of the world the nature of the post-war world organization for which they are sacrificing their services and their lives.

Details of the Labor Day address have not yet been worked out. But one plan, still tentative, was for the President to appear on a radio program with President-elect William Green and Philip Murray of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations. This plan, however, is subject to general revision.

Medical Center Dedication

In announcing the speaking plans, Early made it clear that Mr. Roosevelt planned to speak through the organizations before which he was to appear at a national and world audience. All major radio networks will broadcast the speeches, and they will be rebroadcast to the world by short wave in half a dozen languages.

In discussing the August 31 address, Early said Mr. Roosevelt will be speaking to an assembly of students from all the United Nations.

Corporate Taxation

One of the notable features of the proposed new tax legislation is the great reliance placed on increased corporate taxation. In tomorrow's Post, Dan Thorop Smith, Associate Professor of Business and Finance, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, discusses the proposed corporate taxation as a means to curb inflation. Prof. Smith's article is one of a series now running in The Post every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, in which wartime taxation is discussed and analyzed by experts.

Producers Protest

OPA Prepares to Put Ceiling On Live Hogs Now, Beef Later

Over the protests of representatives of the livestock industry, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that it was drawing plans to place price ceilings on live hogs with similar action with respect to beef cattle to be started in the "near future."

Action on this sector of the anti-inflation front was made possible recently when Secretary of Agriculture Claude A. Wickard announced that he had withdrawn his opposition to the step. Under the price-control law, no such action could be taken without Wickard's approval. It was expected that the move would result in stabilizing meat marketing conditions, preventing packers from being squeezed between rising livestock prices and ceilings on meat at the wholesale level.

Zone Prices Planned

OPA announced that wholesale prices would be adjusted also on a zone basis to eliminate inequalities. Both hogs and beef cattle are now selling at prices 125 per cent above parity. Under the Price Control Act, OPA, with the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, may set the ceilings at any level above 110 per cent of parity. Whether OPA decided to cut prices back to 110 per cent of parity or to leave livestock raisers a margin above parity prices could not be determined last night. However, it was recalled that President Roosevelt Tuesday called upon both agricultural and labor groups to make sacrifices in the interest of winning the fight against inflation.

Wickard Must Approve

J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator of OPA, said the hog and cattle price ceilings would be worked out in cooperation with producers and would be submitted to Wickard for final approval. Earlier, Price Administrator Leon Henderson received a delegation from the livestock industry who protested against placing any ceiling on live animals. Henderson told the group that he appreciated their viewpoint, but felt, nevertheless, "that livestock prices are too high."

Galbraith stated that steps would be taken to enforce the grading provisions of the beef price regulation to keep different grades of beef in a proper price relationship to each other. At the same time, he assured the cattle producers that the OPA would try to avoid discouraging normal feeding and marketing of livestock. Whenever possible, producers will be notified in advance of price regulations, he said.

A group of hog producers will meet with OPA again next week to confer on the proposed price ceiling.

National Park College to Be Army Hospital

Convalescents Will Go There; 400 Girls Told School Will Be Closed

National Park College, fashionable school for girls at Forest Glen, Md., will be taken over shortly by the Army Medical Corps, it was learned yesterday.

Although the deal has not yet been closed, according to War Department officials, negotiations are virtually complete and school authorities yesterday notified the 400 students enrolled for the fall term that it would be impossible to open the school September 14 as scheduled. Faculty members, most of them women, previously had been notified by telegram that their services would not be needed this fall.

It is understood the 180-acre tract and buildings are to be used as a convalescent home in conjunction with Walter Reed Hospital. The War Department, however, would make no comment other than to say that the negotiations were not complete.

Fall Registration Completed

The letter to the students, written by Dr. Roy Tasso Davis, president of the college, said in part: "I deeply regret to inform you that the United States Government has found it necessary to take title by condemnation proceedings to our entire National Park College property for the use of the United States Army as a hospital. The fact that the campus and buildings are near Walter Reed Hospital, Army Medical Center, makes them desirable."

Withholding Tax Approved By Senate Unit

Plan Calls for Pay Deductions to Begin In January

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate Finance Committee last night approved payroll collection of drastically increased income taxes beginning in January next year, with modified application of the House-approved withholding tax.

The vote, described as tentative, was 19 to 6. Action followed overwhelming rejection of the so-called Ruml plan designed to place taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis by skipping 1941 tax liabilities.

As in the House bill, the withholding tax would start at 5 per cent in 1943, when taxpayers also would be subject to regular collection of taxes on this year's income, and move up to 10 per cent in January, 1944.

On Treasury recommendation, the committee agreed to a simplification sponsored by Harry C. Greth of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. which would furnish employers with a simple table to determine the amount of tax to be withheld from each worker every pay day. This would group employees in "wage bands" according to pay, with a separate tax computation for every five-dollar weekly variation in pay.

Other modifications in the House plan would exempt from withholding tax collections all bond and

Japs Retreat, Apply Torch To Chuhsien

Chinese Confident They Will Capture Base Called Ideal For Bombing Japan

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Aug. 26.—Chuhsien, site of the biggest air field in China and a potential Shanghai-La from which to bomb Japan, is under concerted attack by Chinese forces rapidly prosecuting their counterdrives against the Japanese invaders in Chekiang and Kiangsi Provinces, it was reported tonight.

The Chinese have taken a point 4½ miles south of the strategic city in western Chekiang and also are attacking Japanese forces directly to the westward, the Chinese high command said.

[The United Press said the city was under siege.]

Chungking Confident

Some quarters in Chungking expressed confidence that the Chinese soon would recapture both Chuhsien and Lishui, second-best site from which to launch air attacks against Japan's home islands.

The Chinese, who already have reported they have Lishui under siege, added tonight that Japanese troops who tried to push south from Sungyang in Chekiang Province had been defeated and were fleeing back toward Lishui, 25 miles to the east.

Still other Japanese forces were declared by the Chinese command to have been crushed 15 miles northwest of Sungyang five days ago.

[Suggesting Japanese nervousness, the German radio said Japanese-held Shanghai, which has been out of the range of Allied planes, had its first blackout from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m. Tuesday, while Japanese planes surveyed the results.]

Chinese soldiers who reached the southwestern suburbs of Chuhsien by the railway from Kiangshan could see flames in the city, a front-line dispatch to the Central Daily News reported. It added that the fire set by the Japanese indicated their withdrawal was imminent.

Advance Continues

Another Chinese column striking eastward across the country from Changshan occupied Chaohsien, about 15 miles west of Chuhsien, Monday, and continued its advance toward the city, Chinese reports said.

The Central Daily News in a review of the war apparently inspired by official quarters said the offensive in the Solomons and the Chinese counteroffensive in Chekiang and Kiangsi Provinces would force the Japanese to revise plans for their continental advance. Hitherto most Chinese authorities have expected an early Japanese attack on Siberia.

"These two thus far successful operations are two bright spots on the global front," the review said.

Woman, 79, Dies Of Bus Injuries; D. C. Toll Now 67

Deaths this year 67
This time last year 52
Total last year 95

The District's traffic toll for 1942 last night rose to 67 with the death in Emergency Hospital of Miss Katherine E. Hill, 79, of 2100 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. She was fatally injured by a Capital Transit Co. bus at Twentieth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Miss Hill, a pedestrian, was struck at 6:10 p. m. and died in Emergency Hospital at 10:50. She suffered a compound fracture of the right leg and severe shock, physicians at the hospital said.

Driver of the bus, police said, was James A. Nelson, 24, of 1000 South Carolina Avenue Southeast. He said he had been operating a bus 14 months.

Miss Hill's death was the second in two days, the other victim being Allan R. Thorne, 16-year-old Western Union messenger boy, of Riverdale Heights, Md., who was killed by a truck Tuesday at Fourth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

Reds Advance In North, Kill 45,000 Nazis

Smash to Gates Of Rzhev in 30-Mile Drive to Relieve Periled Stalingrad

By Henry C. Cassidy

Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 27.—A Red army counterattack northwest of Moscow to relieve pressure on imperiled Stalingrad was reported officially early today to have killed 45,000 Germans in a 15-day push that recaptured 610 localities and regained from 25 to 30 miles of territory.

Soviet troops under Gen. Gregory Zhukov, who turned the Germans back from Moscow last fall, were reported fighting at the gates of Rzhev, 130 miles northwest of the Red capital, after retaking the towns of Karmanovo, Pogoreloye-Gorodishche and Zubtsov.

Five German divisions were reported to have suffered heavy losses and nine others were routed by the Red army.

It still was too early to determine the effects of this huge drive on the still sorely critical Stalingrad front, where a million-man Nazi army was assaulting the approaches to that vital Volga city from two directions.

Fierce Battles Continue

A midnight communique issued after the special announcement telling of the drive on the Kalinin and Western fronts, said:

"In the area northwest of Stalingrad intense battles continue. The enemy has concentrated large forces of tanks and infantry and under cover of his air force is continuously attacking our positions.

"Our troops are repelling enemy attacks as well as launching counterattacks upon the German Fascist troops."

Deep in the Caucasus the Germans were acknowledged to have reached Mordok, only about 85 miles west of the rich oil city of Grozny. The advance to Mordok represented a 40-mile Nazi gain from the Prokhladnenski sector to the west, but the Russians said fighting was continuing in the latter area.

Soviet troops still were hanging on the German flanks northwest of Stalingrad inside the Don River loop itself at Kleiskaya, but the main Nazi drive had passed that city to cross the Don for a bloody tank and infantry descent on Stalingrad.

Russians Hold Jeopardy

The Red army also was battling stoutly southwest of Stalingrad in the Kotelnikowski sector, where the communique said "Soviet forces are holding the enemy onslaught and wearing down his man power by repeated counterattacks."

Sixty-two Nazi tanks were reported hit by one Soviet unit in this sector, and a second unit destroyed 13 others and killed 500 Germans in

Runoff Is Seen In Mississippi; Maybank Leads

As vote counting in the primaries of three States neared completion last night the Republican gubernatorial nomination in California went to State Attorney General Earl Warren, who also gave Gov. Culbert L. Olson a strong fight for the Democratic nod.

In other California races, in which 23 Congressional posts were at stake, Will Rogers, Jr., son of the late humorist, led Representative Leland M. Ford in the Sixteenth District Democratic primary, but trailed on the G. O. P. ticket.

A run-off primary for Mississippi's Democratic nomination for United States Senator appeared certain between James O. Eastland and either Senator Wall Doxey or Representative Ross Collins. Doxey claimed an edge over Collins.

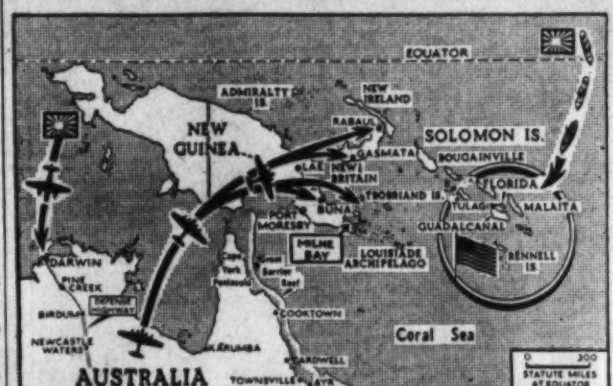

Representative John E. Rankin held a substantial lead over State Senator Arthur Shook in the First Congressional District.

With returns almost complete in South Carolina, Eugene S. Blease trailed United States Senator Burnet R. Maybank, Administration supporter, in the Democratic Senatorial contest.

Lose Transport, Probably Cruiser

Japs Land on Guinea 500 Miles Off Australia

Japs have landed ground forces at Milne Bay in southeastern New Guinea, despite heavy opposition by Allied planes, it was reported today from Australia. Earlier it was announced that Allied planes attacked a Jap convoy south of the Trobriand Islands and pounded Jap bases at Rabaul, Gasmata and Buna. The main Japanese fleet reportedly had withdrawn from the Solomon Battle (circled area).

General MacArthur's Headquarters

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia (Thursday), Aug. 27.—Japanese shock troops have landed on the southeastern tip of New Guinea less than 500 miles from the Australian mainland despite heavy Allied air action which destroyed one enemy transport, six landing barges and probably a cruiser, it was announced officially today.

The Japanese marines landed from a small convoy at Milne Bay, 180 miles down the New Guinea coast from Buna, where the Japanese were revealed yesterday to have established an air base in their attempt to conquer all New Guinea.

"Our ground forces anticipated this movement and are in contact with the enemy," a spokesman said. The Japanese convoy was the same which Allied airmen had attacked two days ago south of the Trobriand Islands, he disclosed. In those attacks one enemy gunboat was sunk and an undetermined number of casualties were inflicted on two transports which were machine-gunned by Allied fighters.

20 Missioners Off Gripsholm Seized by U. S.

Suspected of Acts Injuring Nazis; Sent to Ellis Island

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 26.—Among the 145 returning refugees transferred to Ellis Island today from the liner Gripsholm were about 20 missionaries suspected of participating in activities detrimental to the United States while aboard the ship.

Some of the diplomats said a series of pacifist meetings looking toward the opening of peace negotiations with Japan took place during the voyage here.

During the day a steady stream of grim testimony to war's effect on civilians in the Orient—men and women returning with thin bodies and shadowed eyes—disembarked from the liner which arrived yesterday with Americans from Japanese-held territory.

By late afternoon 601 of the more than 1400 repatriates had left the vessel, including those sent to Ellis Island for further questioning concerning their loyalty.

Though instructed by the State Department to speak cautiously of their experiences—out of deference to their compatriots still living in conquered countries—some volunteered information about starving.

Officer Thrown From Gun Post

Kent Crash Survivor Found, May Explain Cause of Tragedy

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 26.—What happened to the Sunderland flying boat that carried the Duke of Kent to his death yesterday against a mountain-side in the Scottish highlands may be told by a flight lieutenant who turned up today as the sole survivor of the air crash in which it had been believed all the crew perished.

More than 24 hours after the plane crashed while taking the Duke on a war mission to Iceland, Lieut. Andrew Jack, 24-year-old Scotsman, was found dazedly stumbling through the heather.

From the tail-gunner's post he was thrown clear and had wandered about three miles from the scene, suffering burns on face, arms and legs, but not seriously injured. In all, 14 were killed.

The Duke will be buried, with full military honors but in privacy for the safety of the royal family, in the royal tomb house under St. George's Chapel in Windsor Castle where others of the reigning family lie.

Among those in the plane was

Big Battle Shaping In Egypt; U. S. Planes Raid Axis Shipping

By Leon Kay

United Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Aug. 26.—New Zealand troops routed an Italian division on the El Alamein line and United States bombers blasted Axis shipping in Suda Bay, Crete, and the Corinth Canal in Greece today as the Allies lashed out to break up Marshal Rommel's preparations for a new offensive in Egypt.

The New Zealanders, backed by a terrific artillery barrage and spearheaded by native Maoris, attacked the Italian Bologna division in the center of the line to break the month-long desert lull, front dispatches said.

The Italians were surprised and terrified. Some fled, but many were reported killed or taken back as prisoners when the New Zealanders returned to their original positions.

The American bombers dropped more than 50,000 pounds of bombs on objectives in the Corinth Canal and in Suda Bay in a dawn foray involving a round-trip flight across the Mediterranean of nearly 1400 miles, a dispatch passed by United States military censors said.

Navy Using Guadalcanal Fields Built By Enemy

33 Nip Aircraft Shot Down in Two Raids; Damaged Transport Reported Abandoned

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Naval and Marine Corps warplanes operating from land bases in the Solomons have taken further heavy toll of the attacking Japanese ships and aircraft and forced the main enemy invasion fleet to withdraw, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

Reporting on the progress of the great battle being fought off the strategic Solomon Islands, the Navy said that while it was too early to forecast its outcome, the results to date "are encouraging."

Six more Jap vessels were reported damaged by the smashing attacks of Navy and Marine Corps dive-bombers or torpedo planes operating from airbases on Guadalcanal, captured from the Japs two weeks ago. This brings the total of Jap vessels hit to at least 13.

33 Planes Shot Down

Fighter planes operating from these same fields have played havoc with Jap air forces attacking our positions ashore. Thirty-three enemy craft were shot down in two raids, in which only four American fighters were destroyed.

Twenty-one Japanese aircraft were destroyed in the first raid—reported earlier—and the remainder during a second assault Tuesday.

The Navy communique described the performance of the fighter aircraft on Guadalcanal as "outstanding."

While the official report declared that the enemy invasion force of transports, cruisers and destroyers which approached Guadalcanal from the north Monday was withdrawing, spokesmen cautioned that they may return.

Jap Losses Heavy

The Japs have taken a beating in the fighting so far, and, of course, suffered very heavy losses in the Battle of Midway. Nevertheless, it is Tokyo's decision that recapture of the southern Solomons is essential to Japan's war plan, even stronger forces could be sent into the islands.

For the moment, however, Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley's forces have not only stopped the enemy fleet but have damaged it severely with apparently little damage to our own forces.

We suffered heavy losses in taking the islands earlier in the month. But we took them. Japan thus far in its counterattack has been receiving heavy blows without getting anywhere.

Giving additional details of the battle, which is now in its fourth day, the communique disclosed that when Jap destroyers shelled Guadalcanal Island Sunday night (Washington time) our dive bombers damaged one of the enemy ships.

Dive bombing enemy warships at night is rather unusual, but there should have been nearly full moon over the South Sea island that night.

On Tuesday the Navy disclosed that "U. S. aircraft" had attacked the Japanese fleet approaching the southern Solomons and had left an enemy cruiser and a transport "burning fiercely." Yesterday's communique revealed for the first time that we have established an air base on Guadalcanal Island—presumably restoring the Jap airbase near Lungo harbor—and that the attacking American planes came from there.

These shore-based Navy and Marine Corps aircraft, it was disclosed, have bombed or torpedoed

Allies Concede Germans Nothing In Secret Weapons, Barnes Says

Eisenhower-Churchill Meeting Stir New Second Front Talk

By J. Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer
London, Aug. 26.—The chief of the United States Army's arms design division declared cryptically today that the Anglo-American Allies were producing secret weapons with surprising potentialities and that new British weapons in production were "really eye-openers."

The statement by Brig. Gen. G. M. Barnes and a meeting between Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Prime Minister Winston Churchill on his return from Moscow via the Middle East again stirred speculation on the opening of a second front and selection of a generalissimo to command it.

Barnes asserted that the Allied production of munitions would support a full-sized army in any enterprise, but declined to comment on the transport situation, which official circles considered still serious.

The 56-year-old general, here as head of a technical mission working with British munitions producers, is an expert in developing advanced types of armament, particularly heavy ordnance and anti-aircraft weapons.

Concede Nothing to Nazis

He declared the Allies need not concede any superiority to the Germans in qualitative weapons, and added:

"It is no longer a question of ordnance production as far as supplying a vast Army is concerned."

A three weeks' tour of British factories convinced him that British workers, doing such exacting tasks as boring guns, are showing American women what they will have to do to replace skilled male mechanics.

"We employ women, but we are going to have to employ many more," he said.

The comparatively rare meeting of Churchill with the chief of American forces in the European theater was authoritatively described as a "visit by General Eisenhower to pay his respects," but it was considered certain that the Prime Minister gave the general a full picture of the critical Russian military position and the second-front possibilities.

Lytelton Tells U. S. Of British Production

By Geoffrey Parsons, Jr.
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.
London, Aug. 26.—Planes, anti-aircraft guns and barrage balloons were rushed across the Atlantic from Great Britain to reinforce America's air defense when the United States was first threatened with air attacks, Oliver Lytelton, British Minister of Production, declared tonight in a short-wave broadcast to the Western Hemisphere.

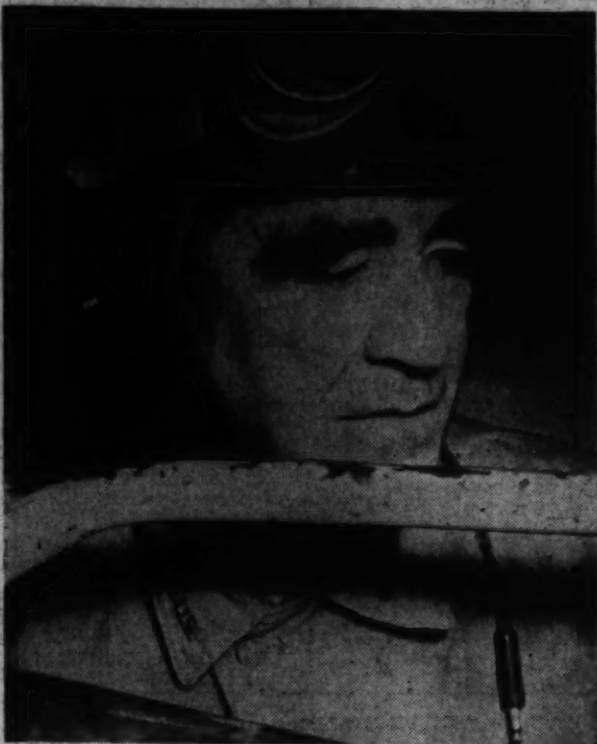

Frankly admitting that he was blowing Britain's trumpet for a change, Lytelton added that submarine chasers were sent from British flotillas to help in the battle against U-boats off the American coast and in the Caribbean.

"I am going to blow my trumpet," he told America, "because I believe that the extent of our production in the United Kingdom is not even now fully known in the United States."

"If we make allowances for the difference in population, in the first quarter of this year we produced a little less than two and a quarter times the volume of army munitions that you did and about twice the weight in combat aircraft."

"In the second quarter up to June 30 your output grew immensely, but in proportion to population we were producing about twice the weight of aircraft and one and a half times as much army munitions."

"I believe that in the third quarter the comparison will be less favorable to us and that is a great source of satisfaction."

New Chungking to Lanchow Airline Hailed as Supply Route

Chungking, Aug. 26 (UPI)—The inauguration of a commercial air transport and passenger service between Chungking and Lanchow, only 233 miles from the Mongolian border, was hailed today as an important step in opening a vital supply route over China's vast northwestern provinces.

The 800-mile Chungking-to-Lanchow service is operated by the China National Aviation Corporation, which plans to push its routes on to the northwestern part of Sinkiang Province—and the very borders of India and Russia.

The Chinese government and the United States-owned Pan American Airways, which control C. N. A. C., hope to use the line to bring supplies which China has needed so badly since Japan closed the Burma Road. To meet the gigantic task, C. N. A. C. recently hired a large number of American pilots, and bought more American DC-3's which are used extensively on United States air lines.

The government-owned Eurasia Aviation Corp. also is expanding in China's northwestern provinces, but the size of its personnel and equipment remains secret.

Well-informed sources also reported that the central Chinese government was receiving the fullest cooperation of provincial officials who hoped to develop a land supply line over the ancient silk route in northwest China.

Vichy France Rounds Up Foreign Jews

By the United Press
On the French-Swiss Frontier, Aug. 26.—A roundup of all foreign Jews who entered France since 1936 has begun in the unoccupied zone despite an urgent plea from Pope Pius XII to Chief of Government Pierre Laval for "moderation" in the treatment of Jewish and other ex-patriates, it was revealed tonight.

The German-controlled Paris newspaper Petit Parisien announced that the roundup "actually is in progress throughout unoccupied France" and that the arrests are to be completed before tomorrow.

The Papal Nuncio, Valerio Valeri, was reported to have relayed the Pope's plea during a conference in Vichy Saturday with Laval.

Meanwhile, a "spitfire" written protest against racial and religious persecutions was reported to have been sent to French Chief of State Marshal Henri Philippe Petain by Emmanuel Celestine Cardinal Suhard, the Archbishop of Paris, and Pierre Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyons.

(The United Press in New York received a Vichy dispatch sent at 9 p. m. Vichy time which read: "Two hundred Jewish arrests—remainder of dispatch censored.")

Jewish and other world charity groups were reported to have appealed to Vichy to provide safe haven in the United States and elsewhere abroad for 3500 Jewish children, ranging in age from a few days to 10 years, who were left behind during the recent gigantic roundup of 25,000 Jews in occupied France and 2500 Jews in unoccupied France for deportation to eastern Europe at the demand of the Germans.

Ikkes Appoints Gardner Solicitor For Interior Dept.

Warner W. Gardner, solicitor of the Department of Labor since November, 1941 yesterday was named by Interior Secretary Harold I. Ikkes to fill a similar position with the Department of the Interior.

He will succeed Nathan R. Margold, who recently was appointed associate justice of the District Municipal Court.

A native of Indiana, Gardner was educated at Swarthmore College, Rutgers University and the Columbia University law school. He served Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone of the Supreme Court as a law clerk from 1934 to 1935 and later was employed in the office of the Solicitor General before going to the Department of Labor.

He is married and resides at 116 Summerfield Road, Chevy Chase, Md.

That Makes 30 Jury Indicts Leader of Detroit Bund

New York, Aug. 26.—A Federal grand jury today indicted the Detroit German-American Bund leader, Fritz Streuer, and reindicted Bundist Herman Agne of Philadelphia, in a continuing drive against the Fascist organization.

Streuer was charged in two indictments with conspiracy to advise bund members not to serve in the armed forces and advising them to make false statements in violation of the alien registration act. Agne, previously indicted for violation of the Alien Registration Act, was named today on the nonmilitary service charge.

Streuer's indictment brings to 30 the number of Bundists under indictment.

Judge Eugene Rice in another action held Mrs. Mathilde Pollman, 53-year-old German-born American citizen of Union City, N. J., in contempt of court for giving evasive answers to the grand jury when she was questioned during the bund investigation. Mrs. Pollman, who operates a restaurant with her husband and was leader of a women's bund unit, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

United States Attorney Mathias Correa said Streuer was leader of the Detroit bund unit and that some of its meetings were held in the restaurant operated by Max Stephan, convicted traitor. A German staff army sergeant in the first World War, Streuer was naturalized in Detroit in 1931 and formerly was employed at the Solvay Process Co. there.

Before the new indictments were handed down, Dr. Otto Willumet, 27, former Chicago Bund leader and convicted spy indicted for conspiracy to advise bundists not to serve in the United States armed forces and making false statements in violation of the Alien Registration Act, had pleaded innocent and was ordered held in $10,000 bail.

Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former national head of the Bund, appeared with Willumet. Judge Rice told both men he would appoint counsel for them after they pleaded inability to pay attorney's fees. Kunze recently was sentenced at Hartford, Conn., to serve a 15-year prison term for espionage, and Willumet was sentenced to 5 years on a similar charge.

U. S. Paratroops to Make First Desert Leap Today After Grueling Training Period

By the Associated Press
With U. S. Army on Desert Training Maneuvers, Aug. 26.—The first desert parachute jump by United States troops will be made over this area shortly after dawn tomorrow. A C-47 plane from the air-borne command will let loose a dozen aerial troopers.

In the group will be Maj. G. J. McGowan of Chicago and Capt. Fred J. Corson of Williamsport, Pa. These men have been through the mill at Fort Benning and Fort Bragg. They have jumped at heights all the way from 3500 feet down to 600 feet.

When they go into combat, the troopers are prepared to parachute down onto the enemy from as little as 250 or 400 feet.

Two of the "veterans" of this particular unit are Captain Corson, slim, 24-year-old officer who scales 154 pounds, and Sgt. Charles H. Cline of Clinton, Ind. Corson has been in the Army about three years and Cline had completed almost a full hitch when he got into parachute jumping about 16 months ago. Both are parachute packing instructors now, but jumping is their favorite pastime.

Tomorrow's jump will be the seventeenth for Captain Corson, the sixteenth for Cline, and each in his way is completely matter of fact about it.

Sergeant Cline, for instance, after showing how to climb into the back-pack 'chute and strap the emergency parachute to his chest, said, "If your main 'chute doesn't work, well, that's it—and you're out."

There is far more to this business than merely jumping out the side door of a specially designed transport plane. Each of these men—and the air-borne command's other thousands—has been through a month's grueling training at Fort Benning.

They had three weeks of intensive physical conditioning and parachute packing, with training jumps from the controlled and free towers during the third week. During the fourth week they jumped from planes, with five leaps the minimum requirement for their wings. No matter how many jumps the parachute troopers make, they never get bored at their work. Or, to quote Captain Corson:

"I've made 16 jumps and each one's a new thrill."

Another feature to keep incentive alive is that in the parachute troops, each enlisted man draws $50 a month and each officer $100 a month extra pay.

R. A. F. Fighters Attack French Targets

London, Aug. 26 (UPI)—Royal Air Force fighters darted through heavy thunderclouds over the Straits of Dover today to make an offensive sweep over northern France, evidently on targets well inland.

An air ministry communique revealed that single R. A. F. bombers on armed reconnaissance attacked targets in west Germany and Holland by daylight Tuesday.

Coastal command planes carried on the attacks during the night, concentrating on German shipping. Two vessels in a convoy off the Friesian Islands were hit as were docks and shipping at La Paleice on the French Atlantic coast. One bomber was missing.

(The German high command said bombers effectively raised war plants in the Midlands of England Tuesday afternoon.)

Nazis Raid East Angles

London (Thursday), Aug. 27 (UPI)—German raiders showed fireworks early today on several points in East Angles. Two persons were injured in one town.

Grew, Others Return to D. C. From Orient

Joseph C. Grew, United States Ambassador to Japan before Pearl Harbor, was among the Washingtonians who returned to the city yesterday after disembarking from the exchange liner Gripsholm Tuesday in New York.

Grew reported immediately to Secretary of State Hull and then had dinner at the White House with President Roosevelt, who was doubtless anxious to hear a first-hand account of events in Tokyo leading up to the Japanese attack as well as how the Japanese treated American nationals afterwards.

Arriving here with Grew was his secretary, Miss Marion Arnold, of 1114 East Capitol Street, who was stationed at the State Department here before going to Japan with the ambassador in 1932.

Also returning to the capital was Richard P. Butrick after 18 years in the consular service at Hankow, Shanghai, Chungking and Peiping. He rejoined his wife and two children, Ann, 8, and Dickie, 6, at their home, 2310 Connecticut Avenue. They had not seen him for a year and a half.

The Chinese people, said Butrick, "have great faith in their American allies; they will never give up."

Joseph W. Alsop, formerly of the columnist team of Alsop and Kinnear, was among 33 newspapermen who arrived on the Gripsholm. He went to Avon, Conn., to spend a few days with his father and is expected here Monday by Robert Kinnear, his erstwhile co-columnist. Alsop was captured in Hong Kong while en route from Manila to Chungking to become an administrative adviser to Brig. Gen. Claire Chennault, of the "Flying Tigers."

Robert C. Coudray, a vice consul, is expected at his home, 4705 Dalton Road, Chevy Chase, Md., tomorrow as is Donald W. Lamm, vice consul, whose wife has been living at 1315 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest.

Consul Kenneth Yarns, whose wife went up to New York to meet the Gripsholm, is spending several days there with his sister, Mrs. A. W. Wells, before returning to the home of his mother, Mrs. Dora M. Yarns, of 1714 Kenyon Street Northwest.

Others Meet Ship

Also on hand at New York when the Gripsholm docked were Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Pickens of 133 Webster Street Northwest, who went up to meet their missionary son, the Rev. Claude L. Pickens, his wife and five children. The Rev. Mr. Pickens was an Episcopal missionary at Hankow, China.

Among the other Washington area missionaries expected home today or tomorrow are:

The Rev. Malcolm D. Shuttles of 315 Fifteenth Street Northwest, who went to China in 1938 with his wife as a Lutheran missionary.

Dr. Charles H. Hopper, Lutheran missionary to Japan, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Hopper of Woodstock, Md. His sister, Mrs. Raymond Sager of 3310 Fifth Street Northwest, expects him here shortly for a visit.

Dr. John D. Bigger of 2001 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest, missionary to Korea; Cameron Arthur Carter, of 1235 Webster Street Northwest; and Winifred Hargrave of 701 Shepherd Street Northwest, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Larsen of Takoma Park, Md. Seventh Day Adventist missionaries, and their three children.

Also expected shortly are Paul Malone, former member of the House Appropriations Committee staff; Walter K. McNamee, Count, former vice president of the Export-Import Bank; Rachel B. H. Craig and J. Gordon MacIntyre.

Other State Department employees headed for Washington from the Gripsholm are J. H. Campbell, Chapman, consul; Charles H. Faust, translator, and Robert S. Ward, consul.

Justice Hughes Gets A. B. A. Medal For Service

Detroit, Aug. 26 (AP)—The American Bar Association Medal for conspicuous service to American jurisprudence tonight was awarded Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States.

Justice Hughes, now retired and living in Jasper National Park, Alberta, was not present for the ceremony at the association's annual convention, but accepted the medal in a letter to Walter P. Armstrong, A. B. A. president.

Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, former President of Panama and an earlier convention speaker, predicted that every South American nation, including Argentina and Chile, will join Brazil in the fight against the Axis powers.

Ship Losses Cut; So Is Insurance

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Marine underwriters here today announced that "an increasing improvement in the convoy system had enabled the first major reduction in war risk insurance rates since the United States' entry into the war."

Insurance charged on ocean shipping, particularly in the Atlantic, had been rising steadily since the start of the intensified U-boat campaign off the East Coast.

No School Girls Will Walk in the Glen

ARMY WILL TAKE OVER COLLEGE—Through this archway many National Park College girls have walked on their way to the gym. But this year there will be no classes for fashionable young ladies in the school at Forest Glen. The Army Medical Corps will make it a convalescent home. The gym, seen through the arch, has an indoor swimming pool, basketball courts and bowling alleys.

and necessary for the use of the Government in the war emergency."

Officials of the college said that registration for the fall term already had been completed and that it included a number of students from Arlington Hall Junior College in Virginia, which recently was taken over by the Government for Army use.

When Arlington Hall was taken over by the Government most of the horses and riding equipment were purchased by National Park College and the Arlington Hall riding master was hired for the coming school term at National Park.

It is reported that the services of the nonfaculty employees at the college, including house and grounds caretakers, are to be retained by the Army. They are to be fingerprinted today preparatory to their being blanketed in civil service.

The college was founded 50 years ago by the late John Irvin Cassidy, and until several years ago was known as the National Park Seminary. It offered a full junior college course and two years of senior college work. Davis is a former member of the U. S. diplomatic service and served for a number of years as minister to several Central American countries.

The picturesque buildings and grounds have long made the campus a sightseeing mecca. The campus is situated atop a hill on the outskirts of Forest Glen, and is surrounded by heavily wooded ravines.

The main building, which is in reality several buildings joined together by over-passes, has been described as a cross between a medieval castle and an English manor house. Surrounding the main building are eight dormitory houses, each built as a replica of a house in some foreign country. One of them has for years been pointed out as a Japanese pagoda, but it was renamed a Chinese pagoda shortly after Pearl Harbor.

meanwhile, raided El Daba, Axis coastal base west of El Alamein, starting a number of fires, the report said, and "all planes returned safely from all missions."

Axis fighters were seen, but they made no attacks.

The New Zealanders' land sortie appeared in the nature of a combat reconnaissance as Rommel began shifting his Africa Corps and air activity picked up, indicating a new desert campaign, in which American planes and tanks will participate, was about to begin.

Artillery cut off the Italians in advanced positions with a box barrage, front reports said, and the Morris pointed out that the British had been sent back to the front in keeping with Rommel's policy of using the Italians as holding elements.

R. A. F. medium bombers and naval aircraft were disclosed to have carried out strong attacks on the battle area last night, concentrating on tanks and motor transport.

South African light bombers participated with United States planes in the attack on El Daba while other South African planes shot up an enemy camp near the front.

(Numerous explosions and fires were caused as direct hits crashed amid enemy planes dispersed over the fields at El Daba, the International News Service reported.)

(One United States pilot, Lieut. Col. Broekhuizen, deliberately flew into telephone wires near one of the airfields, cutting his communications.)

As a result of the raid caught the enemy completely by surprise. R. A. F. long-range fighters were reported to have inflicted hundreds of casualties and destroyed a number of vehicles during a string of enemy transport columns on the coast road between Mersa Matruh and Sidi Barrani Tuesday.

The German heavy resumed night raids in the battle area. A Junkers-88 dive bomber was shot down last night by a New Zealander belonging to the famed Cobber Cain squadron of the R. A. F., which so far has destroyed 288 enemy planes in this war, 163 of them in the Middle East.

(A British broadcast heard by C. B. S. in New York said Rommel had moved up the German 17th Division and the Italian "Isola" Division to the El Alamein front. The Nineteenth German Light Division, which suffered heavily in the last desert battles, has been built back to fighting strength, and a combined German-Italian parachute regiment is also ready for service, B. C. said.)

Rome (From Italian Broadcasts), Aug. 26 (AP)—The Italian high command reported today that German fighter planes beat off a British bombing attack on an Italian convoy in the Mediterranean but acknowledged that an Italian submarine had failed to return to its base.

OCD Sets Up New Unit to Map Evacuation in Case of Air Raids

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Definite plans for removing civilians from target areas in case of bombing raids will be mapped out by the Government's new Civilian Evacuation Service established yesterday by an administrative order issued by the Office of Civilian Defense.

The service was established under a joint committee on evacuation, which includes representatives of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, the Public Health Service, the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, the Office of Education and the Bureau of Public Assistance of the Social Security Board.

Although plans made by the members may never be used, they informed sources within the OCD have indicated that the possibility of air raids this fall or winter are viewed with greater concern.

The OCD is going full speed ahead perfecting its civilian protection plans should there be taken bombings in retaliation for action taken in France by the Commandos and Rangers.

Within the Nation's Capital, the policy on surprise blackouts has been reversed suddenly with the announcement by District Defense Coordinator John Russell Young that no more unannounced blackouts will be held. Leakage of plans of intended blackouts were said to have destroyed the effectiveness of the surprise blackouts.

On the community organization side of the civilian defense effort, the OCD today issued a comprehensive plan of community organization. This program is designed to tighten up the activities of civilian participation as distinguished from the protective services.

Yanks' Smokes Story Probed

Edgar Morris, chairman of "Smokes for Yanks," said yesterday he has asked Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, to investigate a report that American troops in Egypt are being charged money for cigarettes labeled "Compliments of 'Smokes for Yanks'."

The report was carried in an Associated Press dispatch dated "At a United States Army Camp in the Egyptian Desert, Aug. 25. It said that United States troops are 'burned up' more by the cigarette situation than by the desert sun."

"They have to pay 22 cents a pack for cigarettes marked 'Compliments of Smokes for Yanks,'" the report stated.

Morris asked the Associated Press for full details. Under agreement with the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, cigarettes purchased with contributions to "Smokes for Yanks" are to be distributed free to American servicemen.

"Thousands of postcards have been received in Washington from men in the armed forces, thanking the donors for cigarettes received free of charge," Morris said.

face slapping and humiliating tactics of the Japanese. Others spoke of more happy treatment.

Most of the stories of severe treatment came from those who lived through the capture of Hongkong, where prison conditions immediately after the Japanese occupation were described as abominable.

Walter F. Arndt, assistant general manager for the American Presbyterian Lines at Hongkong, told of being held for 16 days in a Chinese brothel where for two days none of the five occupants of a tiny room was given either food or water.

"I was kept in a cell 15 by 17 feet with 30 other persons, mostly Orientals," said H. S. Dunn, Far Eastern manager for Warner Brothers Pictures, describing his 64-day ordeal in Shanghai. "In that time my only food was a bowl of rice three times a day."

Paul V. McClane, Canadian government trade commissioner at Hongkong, described the plight of between 1100 and 2000 Canadian war prisoners at Hongkong whom he said the Japanese authorities refused to visit before they were evacuated.

coupon interest as well as dividends paid by credit unions, building and loan associations, saving and loan associations, cooperative banks and farm cooperatives. Dividends on stock in general would be subject to tax deduction at the source.

Plan Discarded

Chairman Walter F. George announced acceptance in substance of the Treasury's withholding tax recommendations after a three-hour session during which the Ruml pay-as-you-go plan was discarded, 13 to 8. A Treasury variation of the Ruml plan, cancelling out only part of 1942 tax liabilities (the normal tax and the first bracket of the surtax) likewise was rejected, 11 to 6. Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio meanwhile served notice that either himself or Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri will call for another test of the Ruml plan today, in combination with a plan for collection of taxes at the source.

Proposal Attacked

Senator Clark's three-man subcommittee had unanimously recommended the pay-as-you-go system sponsored by Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. At the same time the subcommittee had opposed the withholding tax in the form adopted by the House, as well as the Treasury's own modifications of the Ruml plan.

Clashing with the subcommittee, Randolph Paul, tax adviser to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, had attacked the Ruml plan as providing large taxpayers with a possible "windfall" on 1941 tax liabilities. Paul contended the rejected plan would be pay-as-you-go "only in name," as large tax adjustments still would have to be made at the end of each year.

Asked why the committee had rejected the plan, after the three-man subcommittee had recommended it, Chairman George said he thought the full committee was "hesitant both because the matter has not been thoroughly explored and because the Treasury was completely opposed to writing off a full year of taxes."

Helvering Cites Obstacles

Approval of the withholding tax came even in the face of objections of Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering that collections at the source would require 11,000 additional employees and complicate administration. Helvering said 100 million machines would have to be altered annually for employees. He estimated there would be 750,000 delinquent employers each quarter.

Paul told the committee that Helvering had "greatly overstated" the administrative burdens. He said that only between 3000 and 4000 additional employees would be needed in 1943 and most of the additional machinery would be needed until 1944. He said Helvering's estimates of delinquency were "unduly large" and predicted employers would meet the problem much as they now handle their social security tax.

As under the House bill, all single persons earning over $9.62 a week, and married couples earning over $23.08 weekly, without deductions for dependents, would be subject to tax under Senate bill exemptions.

Deductions Imposed

But the House withholding tax table would impose pay roll deductions on all income in excess of $11 a week for single persons and $26 for married, with $16 allowed for each dependent. The employer would compute the withholding tax on the difference between employee's pay and amounts listed in the House table as exempt.

The Senate committee substituted the "Gretz wage band" table, under which the employer could determine the amount to be deducted simply by referring to a Treasury prepared computation for each $5 wage group. Paul said that out of 454 employers interviewed, almost two-thirds preferred such a table.

The Gretz table, tentatively approved by the Senate Committee, have separate computations by $5 wage groups for single persons, for working married couples, for married families in which one spouse is a dependent, and for heads of families. Under each heading, separate deductions are listed, according to the number of dependents.

Deductions would start at 10 cents a week on single workers in the $10 to $14.99-a-week bracket, and on a married worker earning between $25 and $29.99. In the $50 to $54.99-a-week bracket, $2.50 would be deducted each week from the pay of single employees and $1.40 from the married worker. For each dependent up to five, regardless of the bracket, 40 cents a week would be cut from the tax. As under the House bill, readjustments would be made at the end of the tax year, on the basis of the full year's income, with refunds made or added taxes collected, as the case may be.

The Finance Committee meanwhile held up action on the Treasury's new corporate tax schedules pending submission of concrete examples of how companies would be affected by the two special reserves

Hitler Would Enslave Spain, U. S. Chamber Head Warns

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

A plea to Spanish businessmen and industrialists not to let their workers become the slaves of the Nazis and a promise that American businessmen will help Spain restore its productive enterprises after the war were made yesterday by Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In a short-wave foreign broadcast by the Office of War Information, Johnston stressed to the Spanish people that "the most important problem for Spain's businessmen and industrialists is to eliminate points of friction between management, labor and agriculture."

He said that Hitler's hands are already reaching to seize nearly all of Spain's important enterprises, notably the chemical industry. "Do not be misled by the subtle tactics of the Nazis and their underlings," Johnston warned the Spaniards in behalf of 1,000,000 organized American businessmen and industrialists.

"Spain's future is at stake. Your own existence as a class is now hanging in the balance. You must meet Hitler's plan to starve you into submission. You must prevent the to be set up as offsets against a proposed 55 per cent combined normal and surtax rate and a 90 per cent excess profits tax. One reserve would be built from 15 per cent of net income before taxes, and be used to defray deferred maintenance costs and inventory losses. The other—the so-called postwar credit—would comprise 12 per cent of corporate taxes and be refunded to corporations after the war. Chairman George said the committee wanted the Treasury to specify just what types of relief would be provided under the first or so-called "omnibus" reserve. Congressional staff experts meantime took exception to proposed Treasury increases over House corporate rates and recommended instead a 40 per cent combined rate and an 80 per cent excess profits levy.

the fighting below Stalingrad. One rifle detachment fighting in the main struggle northwest of Stalingrad was reported to have destroyed at least 28 German tanks.

In this fast sandy expanse between the Don and the Volga Rivers hundreds of German bodies littered the approaches to Stalingrad, but reserves continued to roll forward. The Germans were believed to be only 30 miles from the city, but the communiqué did not disclose the exact distance.

The big Soviet counter-drive against the Nazi "hedgehog" defenses, the Rzhys, Glatk, Vyasma triangle west and northwest of Moscow did not come as a surprise here. There have been rumors of this great struggle for days. The Germans have held this strongly fortified area throughout the winter despite Russian gains to the north and south of it.

Besides mauling or routing 14 Nazi divisions in this 10-day-old offensive, the Russians claim they have:

Destroyed 224 tanks, captured 250 tanks, 757 guns, 1,815 machine-guns, 11,100 rifles and a quantity of smaller arms and many vehicles.

Shot down 280 enemy planes in air combat and by antiaircraft fire. Destroyed and damaged 290 enemy planes on the ground.

In addition, the special communications said, six German infantry divisions, two motor divisions and one tank division were routed and heavy losses were inflicted on two more tank divisions and three infantry divisions.

(The German high command, implying the main push was due west of Stalingrad, said great fires were raging in the city as the result of day and night air attack. The Germans indicated that they were still using the Volga supply route which links the Caucasus to the heart of the country, since they reported that one freighter had been sunk and four others damaged on a oil tanker, had been damaged by bombers in the river. In the Caucasus, the Germans said, Nazi troops captured several cities.)

A direct dispatch from Stalingrad to Leningrad told of the civilian reserves which the army has trained to fill the ranks in final defense of the city gateway, just as the workers of Leningrad fought a year ago.

Absences May Kill Soldier Vote Bill

Single Objection in House Today Will Prevent Approval of Amendments

By Edward Ryan

Post Staff Writer

Lack of a House quorum is expected to block action today on the service voting bill, with backers and opponents of the measure both prepared to insist that a majority of members be present before considering highly controversial Senate amendments.

Fewer than a hundred members are understood to be in town, far short of the 219 needed for a quorum. In the absence of the others, a single objection would be enough to hold up House action, or even sending the bill to conference.

Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat) of North Carolina, acting Speaker of the House, indicated last night that it might be possible to win agreement to a proposal for sending the bill into conference so that discussion of Senate amendments could be started while most of the members are still away.

Bland Will Object

Against this chance, however, was the statement of Representative Bland (Democrat) of Virginia that he plans to object to action in the absence of a quorum.

As approved by the Senate Tuesday, the bill permits men and women in the armed forces serving anywhere in the world to vote by absentee ballot in primaries and elections for Federal office without registering or paying State poll taxes. The version that passed the House last month made no poll tax exemption, no provision for voting in primaries and limited election balloting to members of the armed forces on duty in the Continental United States including Alaska.

Opposition to the poll tax exemption is certain to develop in the House from members representing the eight States now requiring poll tax payments—Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Few Available Now

A majority of members from these States were out of town yesterday. Of the few who were available, three said they would be prepared to vote for the bill in its present form, with the poll tax exemption. Other members from these States expressed opposition to the poll tax exemption as an invasion of States' rights.

Representative Patrick (Democrat) of Alabama, said that he will support the voting bill in its present form because "I don't think the boys in the services ought to be disfranchised just because they haven't paid their poll taxes."

"I don't think another member of my State delegation agrees with me on it, but I've never been in sympathy with the poll tax," said Patrick.

Alabama Exempts Veterans

He pointed out that the Alabama veterans of the last war are already exempted from the poll tax payments and said "why should the boys now in the service pay a poll tax?"

Representative Priest (Democrat) of Tennessee, said that while he had not yet studied the final Senate version of the bill, "personally I am in favor of eliminating the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting."

He added that the Tennessee poll tax is expected to be removed by the State legislature in January.

Representative Courtney (Democrat) of Tennessee, said he believed that if a quorum is obtained, the bill will pass as amended by the Senate, and said that he would vote for it.

Smith Strongly Opposes

Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, expressed opposition to the poll tax exemption, and characterized the bill in its present form as an "outrageous invasion of States' rights."

Representative West (Democrat) of Texas indicated that his opposition would take the same form, and remarked, "I still believe in States' rights."

Representative Bland said, too, that he is inclined to vote against the bill in its present form.

Representative Patton (Democrat) of Texas said he had not as yet determined his stand on the bill. "I don't want to disturb the poll tax, but I don't want to deprive the boys of their chance to vote," he said.

A conference of the bill's supporters is expected to be held this morning to determine strategy for the measure before the House meets at noon.

Old CCC Camps To Be Detention Centers for Girls

By the Associated Press

Old Civilian Conservation Corps camps in 20 States will become detention centers and quarantine hospitals for venereally infected girls, it was announced today.

Charles P. Taft, assistant director of defense health and welfare, said more than 25 camps would be made available to State public health departments, in response to "urgent appeals" from many areas that overcrowded detention quarters were preventing adequate treatment of arrested girls. Each camp-hospital will accommodate from 100 to 300 infected girls, who will be kept under care until completely cured, Taft said.

Taft said his records showed a large number of those arrested were "inexperienced girls below the age of 25 and can be rehabilitated if proper case work, job training and employment opportunities are provided."

13 Washington Area Men Win Promotions in Army

Thirteen Washington area men now serving with the Army have been given promotions and new assignments, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Mitchell Dreese, professor of educational psychology and dean of the summer sessions at George Washington University, has been commissioned first lieutenant in the Army and has been sent to Officers Training School at Miami, Fla.

Dr. Dreese came to G. W. U. in 1931 from Grinnell College, Harrisburg, Pa., where he was director of personnel. He became an associate professor in 1933 and a full professor in 1938 at G. W. U. and was made dean of the summer sessions in 1939. He lives with his wife and a son, Mitchell, at 4136 Forty-first Street, North Arlington.

Four local men have been graduated from the Armored Force Officer Candidate School at Fort Knox, Ky., as second lieutenants. They are Lieut. Henry A. Swayze, son of Mrs. Carroll Purman of 929 G. Place Northwest; Edward H. Schmidt, Jr., of 6106 D Street, Capitol Heights, Md.; Leroy C. Hackett, son of Mrs. Esther E. Hackett of 48 Rollins Avenue, Seat Pleasant, Md.; and Adolf P. Schramm, Jr., son of Mrs. Regina Schramm of La Plata, Md.

Graduate of G. W. U.

Lieutenant Swayze entered the service in July, 1940. He is a graduate of George Washington University and the intelligence service school at the Army War College here. He was working with the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, when he entered the service.

Lieutenant Schmidt entered the service in May of last year. He is a native of Seat Pleasant, Md., and a former student of the University of Maryland. His wife remains at the Capitol Heights address.

Second Lieut. Victor Cohen of 1314 Decatur Street has been assigned to the Greenville Army Flying School, Greenville, Miss., a unit of the Southeast Army Air Forces Training Center, as an assistant tactical officer.

A graduate of Roosevelt High School and Wilson Teachers College, Lieutenant Cohen entered the Army in January, 1941, and was commissioned a second lieutenant July 31, 1942, after being graduated from the Officers Candidate School at Camp Davis, N. C. He also served in the District National Guard for over a year. His mother, Mrs. Harry Cohen, lives at the Decatur Street address.

Second Lieut. Robert Goldstein of 2923 Twenty-eighth Street Northwest, has been assigned an instructor in the Physical Training Department at the Army Air Forces Pre-Flight School for pilots at Maxwell Field, Ala.

Former U. of Va. Boxer

Lieut. Goldstein is a former boxing star at the University of Virginia and was employed as coach of boxing at the University of Maryland when he was assigned to duty at Maxwell Field on August 17 of this year. His wife lives at the same address.

William E. Wootton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wootton, 308 Falls Road, Rockville, Md., has been promoted from staff sergeant to warrant officer, junior grade, in the Finance Department at Hunter Field Air Base, Savannah, Ga. Prior to his induction into the Army in May, 1941, he was employed by the General Accounting Office in Washington.

Sergt. Frank S. Hassell, Jr., son of Judge and Mrs. Frank S. Hassell, of 2126 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, has just entered the Adjutant General's Officer Candidate School at Fort Washington. He is a graduate of George Washington University.

James H. Wood, 24, son of Mrs. H. D. Wood, of Wardman Park Hotel, has been promoted to sergeant at the Midland Army Flying School, Midland, Tex. Sergt. Wood, who is an aircraft mechanic, enlisted in the Army Air Forces in September, 1941.

Price Victor W. Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Newton of 525 Lamont Street Northwest, and Henry J. Klein, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Klein, of 3221 Edgemoor Lane, Bethesda, Md., have been graduated as radio operators from the Armored Force School at Fort Knox, Ky.

Carlton U. London, son of Mrs. Clara London, of 419 Seventeenth Street Southeast, has been promoted to technician, fourth grade, at Westover Field Air Base, Springfield, Mass.

Three residents of this vicinity, one a prisoner of war, are among the ten officers who have been promoted to the temporary rank of brigadier general in the United States Marine Corps, it was announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

The officers, whose promotions became effective August 19, are former Col. Samuel L. Howard, Alphonse DeCarre and Bennet Puryear, Jr. Howard and DeCarre are natives of Washington, and Puryear resides in Arlington, Va.

Colonel Howard, now a prisoner of war, will not assume his rank formally until his return to the United States. He was in command of the Fourth Marine Regiment which was transferred from Shanghai, China, to the Philippines just two weeks before the Japs attacked and established his headquarters at the U. S. Naval Station at Olongapo. Later he moved to a position in

At one time, when in command of a detachment of six men in the rear of an attacking battalion, he pushed forward alone, encountering deadly machine-gun fire, and captured two guns. He brought up his men, encountered stiff opposition, and subdued the whole machine-gun company of 172 officers and men, thus preventing the enemy from firing on American troops in the rear.

Brigadier General DeCarre's mother, Mrs. Rosa DeCarre, lives at 618 Nineteenth Street Northwest. A brother, Col. Octave DeCarre, was taken prisoner by the Japs at Corregidor.

Brig. Gen. Puryear was born in Richmond, Va., on January 9, 1884, and commissioned a second lieutenant of Marines in September, 1904. In 1911, he served with the First Marine Brigade at Cavite, in the Philippines, where he was in charge of the supply depot, following which the area between the Marivales River on Bataan and Fort Mills, Corregidor. Here for four months his regiment assisted in thrusting back the savage Jap assaults with deadly rifle, pistol and machine-gun fire until, under orders of Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, they withdrew from Bataan to Fort Mills. Shortly after, Colonel Howard was taken prisoner and his present whereabouts are unknown. A sister, Mrs. Harry Burr, resides at 4530 Cathedral Avenue Northwest.

Colonel Howard was born March 8, 1891, in Washington, was graduated from Virginia Military Institute in 1912, and on May 11, 1914, was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps. After rising swiftly through the various grades, he was appointed colonel of the Fourth Marine Regiment on September 3, 1938. He holds several medals for service during the First World War and later in the West Indies, and has acted as commandant of the Marine detachments on the U. S. S. Georgia and New Mexico.

Brig. Gen. DeCarre was born in Washington, November 15, 1892, received his early education in District public schools. He was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, November 13, 1913. He saw action in France in World War I and holds the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre.

he saw service in France as commander in charge of supply for the Fifth Marine Regiment. He was cited for valor under fire. From 1925 to 1928, General Puryear served in Haiti, and several times during his career served as assistant quartermaster at Marine Corps headquarters in this country. He is now on duty at Headquarters Marine Corps Quartermaster Depot.

The other officers promoted to brigadier general are James L. Underhill, San Francisco, Calif.;

Perkins' Threat Loosens RFC Moneybags

HERE IS an inside story on how different United States officials prosecute the war. The other day, the Army needed 10,000 bales of Egyptian long staple cotton and needed it quickly. Getting that much cotton out of Egypt at this time meant getting it practically out from under Rommel's nose. It might get sunk, it might never leave Egypt.

DREW PEARSON

However, the War Department demanded it, and Milo Perkins, head of the Bureau of Economic Warfare, arranged for its immediate purchase. He also wrote a directive, under his agreement with Jesse Jones, for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to put up the money.

Will Clayton, Jesse's right arm in the RFC, was away. But when he came back, he stormed over to see Milo Perkins.

"I'm not going to do it," Clayton told Perkins flatly.

"Yes, you are going to do it," Perkins shot back.

"It's too risky," Clayton replied, "you can buy that cotton with Agriculture Department funds."

"Now look, Mr. Clayton," said Milo, "under the President's order I have the power to set up a loan agency to buy things of this kind. So far I haven't set up such an agency, but have operated through you. However, if you're not going to cooperate, I'll set one up."

"And where will you get the money?" asked Clayton.

"I'll get it from you. You forget, Mr. Clayton, that it isn't your money. It's the taxpayer's money and you are only the custodian. The War Department wants this cotton and they're going to get it."

Finally Clayton reluctantly agreed.

NOTE—Will Clayton is one of the most charming and likeable men in Washington. Before coming into the Government he was a partner in Anderson and Clayton, world's biggest cotton buyers. A Democrat, he opposed Roosevelt on most things, was a heavy contributor to the Liberty League. With the war, however, he forgot partisanship. But he has never forgotten the bookkeeping mentality of a banker. Despite all the terrible urgencies of war, he seems always to have in the back of his mind the idea of presenting a profitable balance sheet of loans made by the RFC.

Blonde Hair for Tokyo

Colleagues of New Hampshire's Senator Styles Bridges say that when it came to handling women constituents, he is too honest. The other day he received from a New Hampshire lady several beautiful locks of blonde hair. When he opened the box there was so much hair in it that at first Senator Bridges almost thought it was a woman's head.

With it was a letter saying that the owner had heard that blonde hair was being used in bombights and she was contributing her hair to help bomb Tokyo.

Delighted to help the cause, Senator Bridges, a leading member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, took the hair to the War Department. But he was rebuffed. The Army does use blonde hair in bombights, he was told, but one lock of hair is enough for hundreds of bombights, and they didn't need any more.

So Senator Bridges, thinking the lady might want her hair, returned it to his constituent.

In the next mail, he received one of the most vituperative letters in his long career. The lady said she had cut off her hair for the purpose of helping bomb Tokyo and she wanted the hair used for that purpose. She was very indignant, and felt that the Senator was definitely responsible for the loss of her hair.

So Bridges' friends tell him he should never have sent the hair back, even if the Army didn't want it. He was too honest.

Wooden Army Trucks

HOW VITALLY the Nation needs steel is illustrated by a move the Army has been quietly preparing. Beginning in about a week, all bodies for Army trucks will be made out of wood instead of steel.

From September 1 to January 1, 1943, the Army will thus save 1,337,000 tons of steel—enough to make 125,000,000 shells for 75 mm. field artillery.

In addition, all Army cots from now on will be made of wood, thus diverting 78,100 tons of steel to other purposes.

In contrast here are some things which the Navy and the Maritime Commission might be doing—but aren't:

First, the Navy requires practically all steel and other critical materials to be on hand before it begins building a warship. A battleship can't be finished for at least two, perhaps three years. But during the interim, essential materials stand waiting to be used when they might go into other immediate uses.

Meanwhile the Maritime Commission is building merchant ships of the finest type, ships which will be good—if not sunk—30 years from now.

However, at the present rate of sinking, they are more likely to last a few months to a year, rather than 30 years.

The trouble with thorough-going Admiral Land is that he is building up a merchant marine for the future, whereas we need to win the war today. Therefore, some naval architects figure that by scaling down the size of steel plate, and other steel used in the ships, nothing is lost in the strength of the ship, and it will be just as good 20 years from now.

For instance, by scaling down the scantlings 20 per cent, it would be possible to save a million tons of steel on the present Liberty ship program. This, in turn, would build 4000 vitally needed subchasers.

ADMIRAL LAND

NOTE—Even though the Higgins Shipbuilding Co. had not finished building its shipyards, the Maritime Commission had sent it great quantities of anchors, anchor chains and even porcelain toilet bowls to remain stocked up in piles waiting till the ships were completed.

The Labor Party also offered the nomination to Wendell Willkie, who said he would accept if he had the official backing of the White House. The White House made no reply and Willkie went ahead with plans for his trip to Russia. . . . Five Tips for Travelers Who Plan to Go by Trains

With both civilian and military travel running twice that of normal times, Pullman officials have asked public cooperation in a program to extend facilities to the largest number of persons possible. They make the following five suggestions:

1. PURCHASE TICKETS EARLY as possible. Thus, allowing for scheduling adequate accommodations in advance

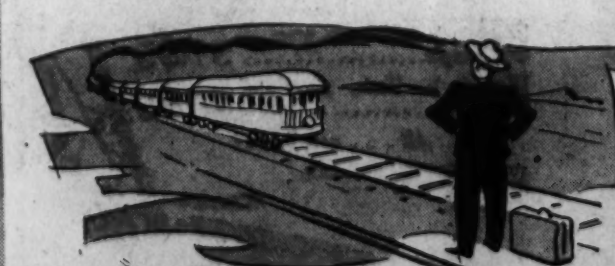

2. CANCEL RESERVATIONS immediately when plans are changed. A late cancellation means an empty space that could have been used

3. TRAVEL ON DAYS when trains are least crowded. If possible. Accommodations are easier to reserve during the early part of the week

4. LIMIT BAGGAGE by traveling "light." With most space occupied, additional baggage presents additional complications

5. ALLOW EXTRA TIME to catch a train. Longer lines at the ticket office or baggage rooms should be anticipated

Blind Workers Make Tent Ropes To Help Win War

By Martha McLean
Post Staff Writer

Splicing tent ropes means fingers rubbed raw by the rough strands and backs which ache from long hours of sitting, but to 14 sightless workers on the third floor of an old building at 1808 H Street Northwest it means that they are at last getting a chance to do something toward winning the war.

Some of these workers, at the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, have given up chair making, which netted them more money, to start learning to splice tent ropes. The program began just last week, and already some of their ropes have passed inspection and have been sent out "for active duty."

Champion among the workers at the old institute is Verotus Manos, 31, who lives at 1412 A Street Southeast. In but four hours he mastered the difficult art of unraveling the rope ends, bending them back to make a loop and weaving them through the body of the rope in nine intricate stitches. He set the first record then, measuring the rope, cutting and splicing both ends in 2 minutes and 15 seconds.

Running him a close second, however, are Clyde Ishmiel, and John Meshaw. And Miss Marian Sine, 18, 630 Eye Street Southeast, "is not so bad either," in the opinion of F. S. Hufty, secretary-treasurer at the institute, who is himself blind.

Clyde, who is 24 years old, lost his sight a little more than a year ago while serving in the United States Navy. He was opening the valves of a refrigerating unit when acid sprayed

STAR PUPIL—Though he cannot see, John Meshaw's nimble fingers splice a rope end quickly and neatly under the instruction of Hugh Wake (right) Meshaw devised his own measuring stick, 4 inches long for the length of the loop, with a notch at the three-inch point for the length the rope ends must be unraveled in making a splice

INSPECTING BY TOUCH—A spliced tent rope just completed by Verotus Manos (center) passes minute inspection from F. S. Hufty, secretary-treasurer of Polytechnic Institute for the Blind. At right is Clyde Ishmiel, 24, who lost his sight in the Navy about a year ago. Hufty hopes that this work may lead to more firms opening war work to the blind over his face. He lives at 617 Fifteenth Street Southeast. John Meshaw, Negro, 2227 Thirteenth Street Northwest, is 52. His lost sight is a result of the first World War, when he worked at a steel plant in Congress Heights. Safety regulations were not advanced then and he had to face the molten metal with his unprotected eyes.

"It was good money, but I paid for it," he said without rancor yesterday. Although his wife is employed at the Bureau of Engraving, he is not dependent upon her earnings. Meshaw has been with the institute 19 years.

The tent work is being done for the Washington Shade & Awning Co., 2021 Seventeenth Street Northwest. The idea of employing blind workers was conceived by L. Y. Buckingham, president, and W. Q. Holladay, general manager of the firm, which has a contract to deliver 150 tents a day.

Only one way is known to get a tent rope spliced—by hand. "And that's a difficult job for the majority of people who can see," explained Hugh Wake, who was sent from the awning company to instruct the workers.

His work is dwindling, however, because his best pupils are now able to take over the teaching. So he just drops in a couple of times a day to see how things are progressing. Mrs. Roy Reddick inspects the finished splices on the premises, and the Government goes over them again later.

Hufty sees this work as only the beginning of a growing part blind people can play in this war. He hopes that success in this venture will lead to other kinds of work being opened to the blind throughout the country, especially in view of the increasing labor shortage in many sections.

Most of the workers put in a full day, from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. A splice a minute as about as fast as any of them can do now, but Wake says with practice they'll get that time down to 40 seconds. Pay is the same as for the same work done by workers with their sight, 80 cents per hundred splices.

And then there are a few whose fingers are just not nimble enough to twist the strands into a neat splice quickly. Perhaps they'll never get beyond making four or five acceptable splices a day. They are not told they must stop, but work on, contributing even so small mite to the war.

President May Back Super Board Plan

Steel Is Issue Labor Board Minority Hits Decision

By the Associated Press

The War Labor Board majority, which voted to make a pay raise for 250,000 "Big Steel" workers retroactive to last February, defended the decision yesterday as realistic and equitable, while a minority assailed it as a blow to the sanctity of contracts.

The decision was made public yesterday, but the formal opinions in the big case, involving five U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiaries, were not released until today.

The majority opinion, written by Dean Wayne L. Morse, public member, said the 5½-cent-an-hour increase was made retroactive to February 15 because any other decision would have been based "on purely legalistic grounds of form and not of substance."

Four employer members of the board, in a bitter dissent, said labor's arguments and voting in the case invited "regulation and retaliation" and predicted the decision "will arise to plague them just as it will arise to plague the four members of the board representing the public."

Contracts Cited
The companies had wage contracts with the C. I. O. United Steel Workers providing for reopening of the contracts on 30 days' notice or cancellation on 30 days' notice. Notice was not given until July, after the Board's decision in the "little steel" case. The contracts, therefore, were in effect until August 9, and the companies contended back pay should not extend beyond that date.

Morse said that for the union to have given notice in February to "big steel" and other companies in the industry "would, in actuality, have resulted in the impossibility of following through with negotiations in 20 days, as required in the contract and would have thus, as a practical matter, brought to an end a large number of the most important contracts in the basic steel industry."

That, he said, would have resulted in widespread uncertainty and confusion and the postponing of such formal notice until after the "little steel" decision was "a decision to disregard a fundamental principle and irrespective of whatever equities there may be, have voted against the sanctity of a contract—something that is essential in human relations even though it may be but a scrap of paper."

The minority opinion was signed by Roger D. Lapham, Cyrus F. China, Robert F. Black and George H. Mead.

Women Lawyers Offer Awards
The Women's Bar Association of the District is offering to women a four-year scholarship in law and two-year prelegal scholarships in the school of economics and government at National University this fall. It was announced yesterday by Marion E. Poole, chairman of the scholarship committee.

Only high school graduates who have had at least two academic years of work at an approved university, college or junior college will be considered for the law scholarship, it was said.

The economics and government scholarships are available only to high school graduates who have had no prior college training.

Requests for application blanks should be addressed to Marion Poole, chairman, scholarship committee, 712 Metropolitan Bank Building, and applications must be received by her not later than September 12.

Expected to Adopt Rosenman's Ideas To Combat Inflation

By Ben W. Gilbert

Post Staff Writer

High administration officials yesterday expected President Roosevelt to adopt Judge Samuel I. Rosenman's suggestion to set up an economic stabilization authority or council to control inflation—probably in a Labor Day message to the Nation.

As proposed by Judge Rosenman, the "authority" would be a super-board with power to determine policy with respect to wages, prices, farm prices and other aspects of the anti-inflation program.

Murray, Green See Roosevelt

Yesterday President Roosevelt conferred with President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. and President William Green of the A. F. of L. on the inflation problem, with a return meeting scheduled for next Thursday. Presidential Secretary Stephen Early stated that the President would disclose his new program in a fireside chat "probably on Labor Day," and that he will accompany the speech with a message to Congress on the same subject—if Congress is in session that day.

Still remaining to be finally determined, it is understood, are questions involving the area and extent of wage control and whether labor, and possibly management, will receive representation on the board.

At a press conference late yesterday, Murray stated that he and Green were in agreement that wage stabilization should be left with the War Labor Board.

"I have expressed repeatedly my belief that wage stabilization should be left exclusively to the agency created for the purpose, and I gleaned the impression that Bill (Green) and I were pretty much together on that."

Murray disclosed that he had called a special session of the C. I. O. Executive Council for next Tuesday to go into the wage situation. Pending "peace" negotiations with the A. F. of L. may also be discussed then, he said.

When the meeting broke up, Murray and Green told reporters that they had canvassed the entire subject of living costs with the President, but that there was no discussion of wage "freezing."

Stabilization Favored
"Freezing means rigidity, inflexibility," Green said. "Stabilization means adjustments to meet the economic situation."

As previously disclosed in The Post, Rosenman suggested that the proposed economic board include a chairman to be named by the President, Price Administrator Leon Henderson, WLB Chairman William H. Davis, Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner Eccles, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones.

Jap People Wish No War, Returned Professor Says
Prof. Carl S. Sipple, who for nearly 12 years was a member of the faculty of the North Japan College at Sendai, Japan, told the members of the Arlington County Kiwanis Club at its meeting yesterday that Japan is the No. 1 enemy of the world.

Japanese people did not want war with the United States. The military leaders for centuries have suppressed the common people of Japan and consequently they have very little influence or control over the government. The Emperor is the creature of the military and dares not act without the consent of the military leaders. This fact is what makes the Japanese menace of such danger to the peace of the world," he said.

Professor Sipple returned to the United States on the last ship bringing passengers from Japan last year and is now making his home in Arlington County.

Lucas Appointed
Irvine R. Lucas has been named deputy warden of the Lincoln Defense Area, succeeding Leslie S. Perry, it was announced yesterday. Perry, who had served since last December, resigned because of "the pressure of other matters," it was stated.

Council Meets Tonight
The regular monthly meeting of civilian defense council chairmen will be held at 7:30 p. m. today in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building, at 1615 H Street Northwest, it was announced last night.

Director and Star Seal it With a Kiss

NOT IN THE SCRIPT—Mitzie Green, musical comedy and radio actress, and Joseph Peveny, actor and director, seal a kiss while going over the script for the revue, "Let Freedom Ring." They were married a short time before rehearsal yesterday in New York. Miss Green, who gave her age as 21, is appearing in the musical, while her husband is the director. Peveny, 30, plans to enter the armed forces after the show opens.

Group to Study Concentration Of Industries

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The War Production Board which previously had indicated that concentration of civilian industries in a few key factories is imminent, yesterday named a committee to study the entire situation. Members are Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of the Office of Civilian Supply; Lou Holland, deputy chairman of the War Production Board for smaller war plants; Amory Houghton, director-general for operations, and Wendell Lund, director of WPB's Labor Production Division.

The group will have general charge of the entire concentration program and will decide which industries are to be affected. So far, the stove industry is the only one that has been concentrated. Officials declared agricultural machinery, bicycles and typewriters are definitely to be considered as next in line.

Emphasis will be placed on goods that are manufactured of metal or which use a great deal of metal. Major considerations in the program are material shortages, labor shortages and transportation difficulties.

Nothing Specific Yet
Officials made it clear that nothing specific can be said now because the vast program is still being studied, but the return of two officials from England from a study of the English method of concentration, led observers to believe that the method employed in Great Britain would have a big influence on what is done here.

It was declared, however, that many factors influencing the British system differ materially from those in this country, but the visit of the two American officials was "considered to have been well worth while."

Officials also declared that concentration of the Nation's retail stores would not come for some time.

Highlights of British System
Highlights of the system employed by the British follow:
1. It is felt that responsibility of concentration are too great for an industry itself to undertake. Industry is insisting that the government take the responsibility of determining which firms are to be concentrated and also the methods of preserving trade-marks and good will.
2. Complete standardization is frowned upon. Economies to be achieved by simplification are fully recognized, but preference is for "utility" models or types. Officials here believe that so-called "victory" models will be generally used.
3. There has been no concentration of British retail outlets, but a number have been destroyed by German bombs and some have been closed because of shortages of goods and labor. No new stores can be opened without license from the Board of Trade and few applications have been granted.
4. Larger stores have been compelled to pool their delivery services.
5. Cross-hauling of food products has been eliminated to a great extent by zoning the country in respect to food distribution.
6. Organized labor has been consulted at every stage in the development of all concentration programs and has been helpful in arranging the most effective transfer of labor released by closed plants into either nucleus plants or into war industry.

Short Shots Paperhanger Calls on Girls To Help Out

The news wires carried these brief items yesterday:

Murray Asks Faster Flow Of Telegrams

CIO President Philip Murray yesterday charged that "business as usual" policies in the communications industry "are resulting in serious delays in the delivery of telegrams affecting munitions manufacture, orders for medical supplies for our armed forces, air raid warnings, and even messages to General MacArthur."

Murray made the charge at a press conference in the CIO's new headquarters at 718 Jackson Place Northwest, at which he made public a five-point program of the CIO American Communications Association to prevent telegraphic communication from becoming "a serious bottleneck in war production."

Lists Five Points
Murray said the program called for:
1. A policy of 20 minutes service from sender to receiver for a normal rate telegram. Joseph Selly, president of the ACA, told reporters that average service was now 2½ hours a message, with some messages taking anywhere from 2 to 24 hours for delivery.

2. All traffic not vital to the war effort would be eliminated. Selly stated that a St. Louis brewery was granted priority for messages over both a steel company and a munitions plant, that a New York City insurance firm receives priority over messages from the Army Interceptor Command, and that in August, Dallas, and Chicago, war messages must defer to horse racing results.

3. Labor recruiting to provide an adequate labor supply must be undertaken.

4. Wages must be raised to stabilize employment.

5. Government subsidies to provide for extra expenses involved in improving service must be provided.

Opposed to Merger
Murray and ACA officials present at the press conference were emphatic in opposing the proposed merger between Western Union and Postal Telegraph as a solution to the industry's reported ills. Murray said the merger plan which is now pending before Congress was "swill Street rumors" and said elimination of present dual facilities would hamper communications in the event of a bombing attack.

Selly told reporters that the Federal Communications Commission is fully cognizant of the problems raised by the ACA and is now completing a report on efficiency of service.

12 Men Killed In Crashes of 5 Army Planes

By International News Service

Lubbock, Tex., Aug. 26.—Four United States Army flying cadets and a civilian were killed in a spectacular midair collision of two twin-engine training planes this afternoon over the Lubbock Army flying school.

Each plane carried two cadets, and a cadet parachuted to safety from each of the ships. One plane fell on the post tailor shop, killing C. W. Singleton, about 36, Lubbock civilian, and two cadets.

Names of the cadets who were killed were not immediately announced, pending notification of next of kin. An investigation to determine cause of the crash was begun.

The crash was the fourth at the school. Five fliers were killed in the other three.

Bomber Crashes Into Farmhouse
Shreveport, La., Aug. 26 (AP).—Three officers and two enlisted men were killed today when a twin-engine medium bomber from Barksdale Field here crashed into the farm tenant house of Leo Gullio five miles north of Shreveport, it was announced today.

Observers said the plane flew at a low altitude for a long distance, shearing off tree tops and snapping telephone wires, before it crashed into the Gullio home.

Gullio, who was listening to the radio, was burned on the back and arms before he could escape the blazing house. He was admitted to a hospital here.

Officials at Barksdale Field withheld the names of those killed until relatives had been notified.

2 Training Planes Collide in Midair
Hemet, Calif., Aug. 26 (INS).—Two aviation cadets were killed today in a midair collision of two primary training planes at the Ryan School of Aeronautics.

Fewer Blackouts

District Defense Coordinator Young is probably right in saying that the public is now fairly well conditioned to blackouts and is aware of what to do when the air-raid alarm is sounded. Considering the many practice tests that have been made, it would be a poor commentary on the state of public intelligence if this was not the case. Nevertheless, the news that there are to be no more surprise blackouts and, indeed, no more than three announced blackouts in any two-month period represents an abrupt about-face on local defense policy. The immediate effect on the average resident, we dare say, will be a more relaxed attitude toward the whole business of blackouts and of taking cover. Mr. Young could hardly expect anything else, after the public has been wheedled and cajoled for months into cooperating for the common defense on the assumption that an enemy air attack might come at any moment of the day or night.

To most residents fewer test raids will undoubtedly imply less likelihood of actual attack. This is a natural but unwarranted conclusion, and Mr. Young would be the first to point this out. What he is after, now that the public has shown itself willing and able to black out promptly, is concentration on the better organization and training of the volunteer services. That these services are, for the most part, inadequate to deal with a real catastrophe has been established. Consequently it goes without saying that to continue practice blackouts on the same basis as in the past would not only be to inconvenience residents unduly but also to encourage continued inadequacy in the administration and execution of the volunteer defense routine.

Duke Of Kent

It is inevitable that some of the youthful escapades of the Duke of Kent will be recalled by his death in a flying accident in Scotland. But it was no escape that ended his life. He was killed on active service, flying to a post of duty in Iceland. There could be no finer epitaph for the man whom Britain still calls Prince George. And the mourning throughout Britain has arisen not only because his death makes the royal family one with all the war-bereaved families of Britain; it is caused by fond memory of the Duke of Kent himself. For the youngest member of the House of Windsor had served his King and country well. He could have led the life of a brash in Whitehall, but chose instead to be a subordinate, going on the errands to which he was directed by his superiors in the Royal Air Force. In point of fact, the duke had put aside the follies of youth long before war came, the turning point having been his marriage to the beautiful Princess Marina. That was well known throughout Britain, though the memory of his youthful follies (which, in a royal person, have to be committed almost in public) persisted elsewhere. The Duke and Duchess of Kent were a devoted couple—just as devoted, in fact, as are the King and Queen and the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. Only a few months ago the duchess had borne the duke a third child, which, as a tribute to our President and our country, had Franklin as one of its names. The British people, tolerant of bachelor gayeries but sentimental over married bliss, will remember their Prince George with real affection.

New Iowa

One could hardly ask for a more impressive summation of the material requirements of a modern battleship than is provided by the Navy Department's statistics on the new 45,000-ton Iowa, the first of its class. Little or nothing is said—for obvious reasons—about the Iowa's armament, speed, or armor. But the Navy, which is justly proud that the largest man-of-war ever built was launched seven months ahead of schedule, is positively laconic about the construction work required. This highlights the Navy's building achievement. At the same time it is calculated to increase the opposition to this country's new battleship program. Leaving entirely aside, for the moment, the much-debated question of whether battleships are outmoded, it is quite obvious from details just released that never in the history of naval shipbuilding has there been so great a use of scarce materials. This is the inevitable price of building such a monster fighting unit. Yet we are to have more like it, for five additional ships of the same type are supposedly building though it may be that one or two will turn out to be aircraft carriers instead of battleships.

If this proves to be the case, it will be a further substantiation of the decision of the House Naval Affairs Committee last June, when plans to build five 60,000-ton battleships were shelved in favor of constructing more carriers. There could be, of course, no legitimate objection to how-ever much material battleships might require if there was general agreement that battleships are still the determinant of sea power. But there is no such agreement either within or without the Navy. The philosophy prevailing seems to be that battleships have a chance to redeem their waning prestige before the war is over, and that, in any case, if the enemy is turning out new ones, we must, too. It is not much of a philosophy, but how else to explain the building of more Iowas?

Over-All Strategy

It is said that as a result of the Nelson furor a fresh directive has been sent to the fighting services and the Maritime Commission asking for a revised list of their requirements. Presumably the idea is to get them to economize their demands in the light of the materials scarcity. It may be granted that this is a step in the restoration of order in our war organization, though not a first step. And before we hail the step even as constructive, we shall need to be assured that strategic decisions have been taken which will be served by the new military requirements. Otherwise the directive would be without any result in providing that impact upon Hitlerism which is the stated purpose of Mr. Nelson's invigorated activity.

For instance, the Army's overshadowing job is to equip seven million men by the end of 1943. Perhaps, as a result of the new directive, the Services of Supplies might be induced to tone down or cut down the rate of fulfillment of their fabulous supply plan. They might ask for less steel in construction, fewer guns for local defense and so on. But what this country needs to know is whether the Army has been instructed to adapt its supply plan to an over-all strategic offensive plan against Hitler. No such plan seems as yet to have been evolved. The evidence lies in the diversion of supplies needed abroad to what the Services of Supplies conceives to be our own requirements for training and defense. Steel exports to Britain, for example, are said to have been reduced by the pressure of Army demands.

Thus the Army, insofar as supply is concerned, is operating in an isolated compartment, and its requirements are all empirical. It seems to be aiming merely at recruiting as many men as possible and getting as much equipment and material as possible for training them. The haste in both respects is the dominating situation in Washington. Only the other day Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, our Selective Service director, warned that married men now classed in 3-A face a draft summons by Christmas. On the equipment side Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Chief of the Services of Supplies, has been getting priority to equip this rapidly growing Army. Both aims do not make sense in the light of our strategic needs. Surely no impact is made on Hitlerism by starving the fighting fronts of tanks and other equipment because they are needed for training middle-aged married men at home.

Similarly with the Navy. Every man in the Navy is looking to the day when he can assist in putting the Japanese navy in Davy Jones' locker. It stands to reason that on the supply side the Navy's requirements must be directed to that end. The entire Nation will applaud the Navy's determination. But what we need to know is, first, whether this aim is the one which will most quickly vanquish Japan and, secondly, whether the plan corresponds with any over-all strategy. General MacArthur, judging from the rumblings from Australia, does not agree that the defeat of Japan will be served by the Navy's means. It is equally doubtful whether the Navy is carrying out any policy which has been formulated in the Combined Chiefs of Staff. Surely the dominant call upon our Navy in this crucial hour in our war with Hitler must be to develop our convoys and to blast the U-boats out of our oceanic waters. For our lines of communications are the very fiber of any global strategy.

So there seem to be many directives but no over-all direction. If neither our Army policy nor our Navy policy has been correlated, there can be no correlation between the supply requirements of our fighting services. In these circumstances Mr. Nelson's request for a revised list of requirements can acquire meaning only if those requirements are based upon a unifying policy hammered out by the strategists on the Combined Chiefs of Staff. That policy already is half born in the knowledge of our strategic needs. These have been outlined in the repeated words of President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill that without waste of time we will relieve the Nazi pressure on Russia. That can be done in one of two ways.

Either we can establish a second land front or we can intensify the flow of materials to the fighting fronts which are actively resisting Hitler, including Britain. Yet neither need has been translated into a policy which is overruling. It cannot be so translated till a policymaker is appointed to do it, namely, a generalissimo. Till then we shall condemn Mr. Nelson to the carrying out of military requirements which have neither any mutual relation nor any relation to over-all strategy.

Vichy's Protest

The State Department is probably quite capable of devising a solemnly ingenious explanation of why American bombers blasted Rouen. But, in our opinion, this is hardly necessary, even if the Laval government has lodged an official protest. Because such protests have been, and undoubtedly will continue to be, worth not more than a dime a dozen. Vichy has objected to our attitude toward the British occupation of Madagascar, to our own occupation of New Caledonia, to negotiations for the immobilization of French warships at Martinique. And these and other objections have been accorded, at least in the public mind, all the consideration due to a shameless puppet and tool of this country's declared enemy. Nevertheless, the protest about the Rouen bombing stands out from its predecessors because it is perhaps the most striking illustration of the abyss that separates Vichy, and all it stands for, from the American public.

We welcome the news that American planes, manned by American crews, are beginning the mass destruction of Nazi military installations in France. We welcome, too, the news of effective American raids on French installations which contribute to the German war effort, though we regret the loss of French lives that is sometimes entailed. Moreover, we look forward to news of far greater attacks by our fighting men on strategic objectives in France. The Laval government and its outthrust patron recognize this, of course, just as they recognize that those greater attacks will surely be made.

In the circumstances the protest about Rouen can be dismissed as mere diplomatic subterfuge, proffered in the extremely tenuous hope of getting us bothered about the propriety of attacks on the homeland of a nation with whom the government of which we still maintain "friendly relations." That the Laval government should continue to be in a position, vis-a-vis this Government, to make this or any other protest through normal diplomatic channels is in itself an utter perversion of American instinct and an affront to loyal Frenchmen within as well as without France.

Juggling Juggernaut

In these days we have every sympathy in the world with copywriters and headline writers. To give a running account of an apocalyptic war in lines of 120-point bold-face type is no easy job, but the boys on the rim are doing their best with it. Thus it would be an ignorant or heartless critic that would reproach them merely because they seem never to tire of hurling fresh tank masses to peril Stalingrad or of stemming drives to check threats to same. But when the boys reach down into the bottom of the bin and drag out "Juggernaut" to describe the progress of the German advance, they are simply asking for it. Besides devouring approximately 36 picas of presumably valuable space, the use of "Juggernaut" as a synonym for any deadly and irresistible movement is something of a libel on a well-bred and, on the whole, quiet and peaceable deity.

"Juggernaut," or "Jagannath," or more properly "Jagannatha," is merely one of the various manifestations of Vishnu. At certain festivals an idol of Jagannatha used to be paraded through the streets of Indian cities in a special car. There is a story that spectators of these were sometimes moved to such a pitch of fanatical enthusiasm that they would throw themselves under the car to be crushed to death by its wheels. If the story were true, "car of Juggernaut" (not just "Juggernaut") might be a permissible metaphor for the advance of an army, especially an army comprised largely of tanks. However, the story is completely untrue; the whole idea would strike a pious Hindu as unspeakable sacrilege. Hence there is no sense to the word at all. Nevertheless, the persistent use of "Juggernaut" in connection with every kind of motorized vehicle affords an interesting example of onomatopoeia, since the first two syllables do seem to suggest the chugging of an internal-combustion engine.

INITIATION

Tonight there is a whispering under the covers: An eloquent silence, for no other ears. Perceive it yet, not having ventured far beyond familiar ways. I am the privileged one: for me this quietude is broken without violence, not suddenly. Yet surely, solemnly, as if These voices had discoursed forever there. With none to hear, and none to pay them heed. Now I may listen, not perceiving yet The import of their muted eloquence. But in a stranger night than this, a thing Will ultimately come to pass, whereby I shall achieve new knowledge: I shall know Whereof they speak, and why. And I shall be No longer foreign to this mystery. RALPH FRIEDRICH.

Letters To The Editor

Giving Lifts

There are two sides to everything, but I have only seen one side of this car-sharing question discussed to any extent—that is the side of the poor little working girl, the poor soldier and the poor "Only a Captain," who stood out in the rain and waited for crowded street-cabs.

If there anyone in Washington or environs except the much-cussed autoist who doesn't stand "out in the rain and the hall and the snow," and the broiling sun, waiting for cars and buses? And should an autoist stop every time he sees "Only a Captain" standing out in the rain, and invite him in, without the least idea of where he wants to go, or should the poor captain give some sort of an inkle that he wants a lift?

Personally, I offer a lift to everyone I see, going and coming, every day, until my car is full, and carry a sign showing my destination, but not 2 per cent of my offers are accepted. Usually the poor little working girl, if alone, takes one disdained look at my overalls and ungainly face, white hair, etc., and I make no sale. If she is not alone she is in a fleet and because I can't take them all they make me block traffic until they decide that united they'll stand on a bus.

I travel twice a day between home and an Army post and pick up more soldiers than Quaker has oats, but I do not go into Washington, so I'm no big help either to men on leave, out for a lark, or on swivel chair duty.

Plenty more people would get rides if they would signal drivers. Very few of whom are crabs or mindreaders, and most of whom get more turn-downs than passengers when they volunteer lifts. B. H. MCKELWEE, Arlington, Va., Aug. 23.

District Salvage

In reply to the letter of "Perplexed" in this morning's Post, I too, have been saving tin cans for weeks. On July 7, I was told that collection would begin in a few weeks. I called again just the other day and received the information that it does not pay junk dealers to handle the tin cans so the collecting will have to be done by city trucks of which there are a shortage. They are working on it and perhaps collections will begin in five weeks, at least not more than two months.

The number to call is Republic 7508, extension 5377. I found, after being referred from one number and one extension to another until I had talked to six different people. I don't see why it should take Washington so much longer to work out the problem of collection than it has other cities but there's the information as I received it. And I'm still saving tin cans at least until my basement is full. WOULD-BE PATRIOT, Arlington, Va., Aug. 24.

Treaty Oak

I have read with pleasure and my glasses the interesting article about "Historical Oaks," hoping I would see a reference to the "Treaty Oak" in our country. This oak is in the grove adjoining Wyoming Apartments and it was under this tree a treaty was made for the restoring of a girl child held by the Indians. I have a piece of a limb which was broken off by a storm. ALLAN MILANE ABERT, Washington, Aug. 23.

Taxi Drivers

Lately I saw a very crabby letter in regard to the "rudeness, impoliteness, etc." of the District taxi drivers, and although I have been riding with them off and on, for at least 10 years I have not experienced anything of the kind. As an instance of their kindness and patience I want to tell you of this example: Yesterday I arrived home from a two-week vacation, and as usual my son met me and brought me home in a District taxi. I was laden with the usual impediments that old ladies seem to find necessary to their comfort, one being a knitting bag loaded with the various leftovers that one always does accumulate on a vacation and into the top of which I had crowded my purse with some few valuables. In the excitement of getting home I climbed up by myself, my coat on my arm, leaving the knitting bag reposing on the seat.

As my son came in with the suitcase after paying our fare, said, "Oh, I left my bag and purse in the taxi." He said, "Well you can go over Monday and get it from their lost and found," and I resigned myself to the result of my carelessness. Now here is the sequel: This afternoon the same driver came to my door to see if this was the place the lady lived who left a bag in my car last night. It was very dark when we came home, and as it is a complicated place to find, he had simply followed our directions without our naming streets and roads. He said he had nothing to do this afternoon and so brought the bag back as I might worry. I say he was a jewel of a man. L. F. BLUE, Arlington, Va., Aug. 25.

Liked 'Intermezzo'

"Intermezzo," which appeared in the Post Impressionist column on August 21, is one of the most graphic articles published recently in that section.

It is during just such periods of silence (which the writer of that column described) that one revisits familiar scenes and, too, it is during these rapturous moments that certain literary works and musical compositions which, in earlier days provoked mutual interest, are recalled.

Our best and most satisfying companions often are those who speak no word but whose thoughts are read and understood by kindred spirits. A. L. A., Washington, Aug. 24.

Service Dates

I would like to know why the women of the WAAC or WAVES are not allowed to go out with the men of the armed forces, except officers. Maybe we don't have their rank, but most of the boys are better than some of the ones with bars on their shoulders. I saw in Parade on Sunday that these girls are not allowed to go out with enlisted men, so every one classifies the enlisted men as inferior. These boys resent that very much. TOM HALL, Washington, Aug. 24.

New Service Men

Well, the old question which rears its ugly and empty head, is on in full again. For the last month, the newspapers have been printing letters from soldiers, sailors and marines in Washington, full of challenges, offers to personal combat, slurs at other branches of the service, etc.

First, it would be good for these men to realize that no man goes where he decrees, or does what he wants, once he becomes a member of the service. He is subject to orders as to where he goes, and what he does, even down to the most minute detail of his personal life. Then again, the factory worker is as much a service man as any man who was ever sworn into service with a combat unit. Without his work, the organization would come to an absolute standstill immediately, from clothing and toothbrush to actual combat weapons. They would not be possible, except for the workman, who produces them.

Then again, perhaps, it would be a good idea for these new made fighting men to learn something about their grim business first, and not think that once they are affiliated with the service they have become brave and bold fighting men, with the weight of their entire organization and its history behind them, and when they do fight, to work against a common enemy, and not their brother in arms. The whole idea is exemplified by an incident which happened on Ninth Street in Washington. Some Allied sailors were in a restaurant quietly enjoying themselves, when three new marines entered, and insisted on belittling them. Finally it became impossible for them to longer disregard the belligerent marines, so they rose from their seats, and as if by prearrangement, picked the two biggest marines, and in less time than it takes to tell about it, the two were on the floor. The third marine, seeing for the first time that MRN had been tackled, turned and ran from the restaurant, to safety, leaving his comrades to stagger out as soon as they were able. I think that it is safe to say that these three men will not make the same mistake again, and that our service will have profited by the lesson. Let's not learn the lessons the hardest way—men are men the world around, and usually their ideas and ideals are as lofty as ours. Every such episode subtracts something from the national effort, and really is "aid and comfort" to the common enemy. WILLIAM H. BLACKFORD, Washington, Aug. 24.

Misplaced Employees

Your editorial, "Domesticities for Girls," which was published on August 21, and in which reference was made to bosses who, because of a lack of stenographers, are compelled to take dictation from typists, made me ask why it is that certain stenographers—as soon as it becomes known that they are capable—are transferred to offices in which there is but little work to do, and most of that is given to youngsters, some of whom can neither spell nor pronounce ordinary words. This is a situation which will bear the closest scrutiny.

Competent employees would be willing to work, were it necessary, for their mere subsistence, but they dislike being denied the right to exercise their few talents, especially during these critical times. An examination will show that half the people spend most of their time in smoking. T. E. L., Washington, Aug. 24.

The Post Impressionist

Palgrave's Leaden Treasury

If mothers could see into the future with a prophetic eye, those whose offspring are destined for Congress would never teach them to lip "Dickory, Dickory Dock" nor "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree."

Careful perusal of the poetic content of the Congressional Record discloses some very remarkable features. The tendency is not only forward but upward, showing a partiality for a higher moral reach and a purer atmosphere. The hearts and consciences of poetry-quoting Congressmen retain their consciousness of whatever things are pure and lovely and true.

Throughout all their quotations there pulsates an earnest spirit, although frequently they fail to give the author due credit. This poetical fare is as appetizing as fat Chalcidian pheasant stuffed with fresh dates.

One is also struck by the nearly total absence of any reference to the early philosophers whose political theories are reflected in our plan of Government, such as Aristotle, Plato, Cicero, Locke, Montesquieu, Rousseau and Blackstone.

Scripture, naturally, is frequently quoted but the attentive reader also has a suspicion that the point being made is not identical with the one which the ancient prophet or apostle had in mind.

It is not solely in the poetical extracts, however, that the student of literature may find things of interest. For lovers of Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology" there is a thrill on page 4214 of the Record of May 11, 1942, in the executive communications. The Chief of Army Engineers there reports that a preliminary examination and survey has been made of Spoon River, Ill. It was the first time that I knew there was a Spoon River in Illinois or anywhere else.

But to return to our quotations. Compilations covering a month show that Kipling is the favorite, with five appearances in the Record. Shakespeare and Longfellow are next, with three each. The others range from Marlowe and Edmund Spenser to Archibald MacLeish and Edgar Allan Poe. In all, 100 poets were cited and slightly more than 1,000 lines of verse were used.

Statistics show that a large portion of the House remains silent, indulging in neither prose nor verse. The remarks and speeches are nearly all contributed by a few individuals. It is odd that while Senator Tydings is worrying himself about the wasteful publicity methods of some departments and agencies the poetry-quoting contingent goes its way undisturbed. The fact that a work has been quoted or published in its entirety does not deter a Congressman from having it reprinted, sometimes even in the same Record, at public expense. No one need ever buy a copy of Kipling's "Tommy." Other favorites seem to be Whittier's hymn, "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," and Tennyson's line, "For Tith into the future," from "Locksley Hall."

The Ship of State is admonished to sail on with amazing frequency and both Houses seem to share identical feelings about the future of truth crushed to earth. Concerning the Ship of State the Record said it was "by a Northern poet but a great one."

Almost anything serves as an occasion for the wailing of the Muse. One extract appeared in a speech about pure water; another was used in an appeal to buy war bonds. One speaker twice used the 22 lines appearing on a Confederate monument and the Record faithfully reproduced both citations. One member found two poems written by his mother and decided to have them included in the appendix of the Record as a Mother's Day tribute. That was another little matter of 44 lines.

Boxer Joe Louis muttered something about the "Bible God's war," and another 95 lines—still—were considered in order.

One orator combined the sublime with the ridiculous by quoting a hymn and a limerick in the same address. The entire 21 lines of Dr. Doolittle's "The Bridge Builder" were repeated twice in one session. Much of the material is sent in by constituents, and a vote's a vote, but 73 lines devoted to answering the question "Where is Shangri Lai?" seems a trifle high, unless the poet has a very large family; all more than 21 years old, and the original compositions bear out Mr. Spidney's observation that "one may be a poet without versing, and a versifier without poetry."

Much of the poetry is reserved to in "memorial sessions, and perusal of the ordinary prose output of the Congress convinces one that it is just as well that they lean heavily on the poets when it comes to eulogizing. In these sessions the sun itself is observed by the dignity of the orators. Despite all the tributes and tribulations of the new revenue bill and sundry other headaches, one Senator finds time to remain familiar with the Greek and Latin classics of his school days and has read into the Record an excerpt from Livy, Book XLIV, chapter 22, containing the sentiments of Lucius Aemilius Paulus, a Roman consul, ancient critic of the conduct of the campaign against Macedonia in 168 B. C.

The Government Printing Office estimates that the approximate cost of printing a page of the Record is 34¢, and one hesitates to try to estimate it just how short a time a Congressman causes this sum to be spent because of his fondness for quoting poetry. Wouldn't it, perhaps, be an excellent idea for the learned solons to refrain for the duration in an effort to curtail unessential expenditures? AN UNQUOTE POST

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The President

IT MAY BE useful to list some of the main subjects that have to be dealt with in Washington:

1. There is a running controversy between the Army and the Navy, and the civilians who are supposed to control and manage war production. In this controversy, the weakness of the civilians is that they have been too slow and too soft in imposing sacrifices that they have been badly organized and inadequately staffed to exercise the power delegated to them; not clearheaded and far-sighted enough to have insisted on the need for bringing requirements and resources into balance. The civilian position has been shaken badly, not because the armed services have "militaristic" ambitions, but because the civilians have not exercised their proper authority decisively and efficiently.

2. IN REGARD to the general conduct of our domestic economy—in the field of taxes and war finance, price and wage control, rationing and the conservation of rubber, fuel, and the like—the existence of so many independent agencies responsible to no one but the President has promoted the pressure groups and the politicians who pander to them. Here again the weakness of the civilian authority in exercising its powers has caused a struggle for power.

AT THE ORIGIN of both controversies we find, when we look at the same fundamental cause: that Mr. Roosevelt has not recognized that the war powers of the President are so vast that they cannot be exercised by a man—that they must be exercised by an institution. We speak of "the President" and we think of Mr. Roosevelt. But in fact the President is the central organ of war government. All the super boards which are set up and then, usually, set down again are attempts to create a synthetic substitute for the fact that though Mr. Roosevelt has a cabinet, he neither can nor wants to use it.

THE REASON he cannot use it is that with only a very few exceptions, his Cabinet is not composed of men equal to the demands of the war. Therefore, he has set up outside his Cabinet men who exercise more real authority than most of the members of his Cabinet. Mr. Nelson, Mr. Henderson, and Mr. Davis play a far greater role in the conduct of the war economy than all but one or two of the official Cabinet. Yet these free-wheeling officials, lacking a true status, dependent on personal relationships, are in a weaker position than they should be when it comes to dealing with the permanent government—with the old departments and with Congress and with the President himself.

Thus the permanent Government lacks real power and the improvised agencies lack the titles of authority: the result is that exceedingly unhealthy condition which is known in Washington as "the palace"—the fact that there are especially trusted individuals who have, sporadically, enormous influence without official responsibility.

WE SHALL muddle along—perhaps successfully and then again perhaps not—until Mr. Roosevelt realizes that the President is an institution which can be administered in wartime only by himself, surrounded, supported, and reinforced by a war cabinet composed of men who have both the titles of authority and the realities of power. The final responsibility is, of course, Mr. Roosevelt's. But he cannot discharge that responsibility except upon the advice and through the aid of men who share the responsibility.

The present system will not work—the present system which is composed of the men with the titles and the men with the nominal powers who lack the titles, and in among them the men who have neither titles nor authority, but simply personal influence at the White House.

A SYSTEM of this kind is bound to be weak and is bound to undermine the prestige of civilian government. The things men complain about—the encroachment of the military on civilian authority, the pressure of the pressure groups, and the general low esteem into which politicians have fallen—these are the consequences of the same central organ of war government. All the super boards which are set up and then, usually, set down again are attempts to create a synthetic substitute for the fact that though Mr. Roosevelt has a

Farley's Defeat Is Necessary, LaGuardia Tells Sports Writer

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 26.—Mayor LaGuardia told City Hall reporters today that he would not support a sports writer or music critic. Yesterday a sports editor showed up and came out with these observations:

1. The Mayor says it is just as necessary to defeat Farley as it is to elect a good Governor of our State. (James A. Farley, Democratic State chairman, successfully campaigned for the nomination of John J. Bennett, Jr., for Governor.)

2. LaGuardia thinks a lot of extraneous issues will be injected in the gubernatorial campaign, but he wouldn't discuss them for the record.

3. LaGuardia is a lot like Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees. He won't tell you what pitcher he's going to use.

The interviewer was Stanley Woodward, sports editor of the New York Herald Tribune, who used to play tackle for Amherst College in New England and whose brief political reporting career consisted of covering the Worcester (Mass.) City Hall.

Said the Mayor to Woodward: "The situation (political) in New York is very tight. . . . One of the big issues is Mr. Farley's dominance of New York politics. . . . Friends of Mr. Roosevelt and I am one, consider the political maneuvering, chartered in such a way as to interpose only one affront to the President, were most unfortunate."

"I am going to take a little time to very carefully weigh the situation. . . . It is just as necessary to defeat Farley as it is to elect a good Governor of our State."

Woodward: "Does that mean that you are going to support the Republican candidate, (Thomas E. Dewey)?"

The Mayor: "That's a fair question. But I said a minute ago that I was going to take a little time. However, I can say that I am going to support the congressional candidates who have pledged their full and complete support of the President in every war effort."

The Mayor added that he was having "press trouble" because a lot of things happen to get him mad. "I can't seem to get out a statement that isn't all out to pieces with interpolations and editorializing," he said. "But I think I'm partly to blame for the press trouble."

Milky Way Is Good For 997 Billion Years—So Relax

Chicago, Aug. 26 (P)—An astronomer said today that the milky way and other vast systems of stars are undergoing a process of "relaxation" and when fully relaxed will disintegrate.

This view was presented by Dr. Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar, associate professor of theoretical astrophysics at the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis. In his new book "Principles of Stellar Dynamics," he said that star systems are born under conditions of unimaginable heat and pressure and that they spend their lifetime in the relaxation process, after which they resemble a uniform gas and begin to lose stars.

He estimated the milky way galaxy at birth had a life expectancy of 10 trillion years.

Official Black Mart

By C. C. Isely

Prefabricated Grain Bins

NOTWITHSTANDING the official outcry against the purchase of steel grain bins, the black market, there has been established, by Federal authority, a black market which operates from Texas to North Dakota.

A black market (lacking a definition by Webster) is a place where material can be purchased at prices higher than those controlled by price ceilings and contrary to the regulations by the price administrator, who is attempting to control established markets to prevent inflation.

For many months it has been known that farmers would have an enormous crop of wheat on the high plains. Due to the long, adverse period of low rainfall, impoverished farmers would not have sufficient storage space on their farms for this grain. Months ago, they asked the lumber industry to build such structures as could be utilized for storage when not filled with wheat, and suitable to shelter implements or for a dozen other purposes which intelligent farmers, planning their own buildings, understand.

Lumber became scarce. For months lumber and nails had been practically frozen at the supply source for retail yards. Retail price ceilings had been established as of March, 1942. During May, the stocks of lumber were becoming exhausted, for there was a rush of farm building and in southwest Kansas alone new farm storage for many millions of bushels of wheat was constructed.

May first, order L-41 definitely froze all lumber at mills. Nails were already unobtainable. The Federal authorities, hearing all the outcry, began to transport their empty steel bins from the corn fields of Iowa to the wheat belt and arranged to transfer 40 or 50 million bushels of their own wheat stored in public elevators to these steel bins. They thus relieved some of the congestion in public storage. There were no new steel bins available, however, notwithstanding the order freezing lumber in regular channels, the authorities arranged to purchase prefabricated wooden bins and began shipping them in by carload.

When these bins arrived, local newspapers were asked to announce that here were bins which the farmers were invited to buy at a price of 15 to 20 cents a bushel. The farmers came, they saw, and generally went away. Only a few could be persuaded to purchase the unobtainable bins that were being offered by an agency of the Government. The first reason being that any farmer could build on his own farm a good bin with a good foundation and paint for 15 to 16 cents a bushel. Here was a bin made of poor material with cracks in it, and which cost from 15 to 20 cents a bushel. The farmers still held back and kept out, providing a foundation and paint, increasing the cost another 20 to 30 per cent. It thus fitted exactly the conditions of a black market.

The price, when completed ranged from 25 to 50 per cent more than in the long-established markets whose ceiling had already been frozen. But the price was not the only deterrent. The buildings were not convertible to other purposes and a farmer schooled in economy wants a building for general purposes if he can get one. Many of these were 12 feet high, and grain cannot be scooped to that height, neither does a farmer care to invest in a $200 loader to fill a 2000-bushel bin. William Arthur, head of the grain division of WPB, appealed to Secretary Mohr of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, August 14, to convince the farmers that they should accept these pre-cut grain bins.

But establishing a black market is not the only misdemeanor. The department press release, in early August, set forth that the authorities had contracted for prefabricated lumber bins to hold 100 million bushels of grain. Roughly, if properly utilized, a bushel of lumber will build storage for one bushel of grain. But these improperly built bins consume much more lumber. Since they are cut in section to ship, they require extra reinforcing with lumber. Since they are not preestablished on dry, high ground, they require extra lumber for skids and footings. Worse than this, since they are built in separate units, each bin must necessarily have four walls, when if built on the ground in larger units, one wall or partition could serve two bins. It is difficult to fully estimate the extra material necessary to build these black market bins, but they use up from 30 to 60 per cent more lumber. So if the contracts are carried out, the lumber wasted will amount to 40 million feet and probably more. This alone is enough lumber wasted to build barracks for four bomber bases.

Now, a hundred million feet of lumber, at $6000 feet to the carload, requires the use of about 200 freight cars. When lumber is prefabricated, nailed to the studs, it is a bulky thing, taking up twice as much car space. Most of the prefabricators are at interior points where the lumber must be shipped to them and then loaded again on cars to be shipped to the point where they are to be set up. Allowing for loading and unloading and three days in transit, and loading only half-car loads, would mean that 6000 railway cars were uselessly diverted from their proper usefulness for seven days each. Since some of these prefabricators are located at the saw mills this waste of car use can be partially reduced, but in those cases the haul would be longer.

It all adds up to, quoting Robert Moses, "Washington has a priority on everything except administrative talent."

War-time Children

Need For Their Supervision

Ottawa. CHILDREN "orphaned" by the war present one of the most serious problems on this continent today. Not the children whose fathers have been killed in action, for mercifully they are as yet a small band, but the thousands of children who have lost both parents to war jobs. In cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific they are roaming the streets all day long. Sometimes they come to school with house keys tied around their necks so they can let themselves in at night. Sometimes they are left locked in cars or trailers. They lunch on bread and butter or nothing at all. Underfed and uncared for, they are pathetic and potentially dangerous.

Juvenile delinquency is increasing everywhere. Washington has had a wave of juvenile house-breaking and shoplifting. A judge in a large Canadian city reports that between 1940 and 1941 juvenile delinquency rose 47.5 per cent. And the rate of delinquency is highest among the 8-year-olds!

We cannot call the working mothers back home, for our war industries need women desperately. There aren't nearly enough single women to do the job; married women must work, too. But what about the children? A noted labor leader in the United States says that if women are pulled into factories without adequate provision being made for their children, society will be half a century getting rid of the "twisted" child care thus created. Shortage of child care is developing into a more serious bottleneck than shortage of rubber or of steel.

Example of Britain. At the beginning of the war Britain faced this same problem of neglected youngsters, coupled with the upheaval of mass evacuations. The situation called for drastic action. Today in Britain, reports a Canadian doctor just returned from overseas, child care is regarded as one of the most important aspects of the war effort.

Whether his place of residence for the duration is a child's home in a recreation area, a foster home on an estate, or a nursery school in London's east end, the child of Britain's working mother today is the healthiest in the world. He gets milk, cream, butter and eggs, which are unobtainable by even the wealthiest adults. He eats oranges, although to his parents they are forbidden fruit. His diet is, in fact, more scientifically balanced than it has ever been before.

Child care in Britain takes several different forms. The first evacuation converted many nursery schools into residential nurseries, for the children of parents who could not themselves take their youngsters away from the danger areas. Heavy bombing doubled the number of such nurseries. Today 11,400 babies and toddlers are cared for in these child residences.

Since the war in Britain entered its "production" phase, day nurseries near war industries have been greatly increased in number. They provide accommodation now for nearly 20,000 children, and plans are made for the construction of another thousand to take care of another 40,000 children. Manchester has opened a great many nursery classes in the elementary schools, including some open for 12 hours a day. In the north of England, the "day guardian" system, whereby a good neighbor takes care of a small group of children whose parents are at work, is particularly popular.

Oldsters Of 65 Invade Hotel Field, Where Youth Once Ruled

By Wise World

New Orleans, Aug. 26.—New prospects of jobs for men shelved as "too old to work" have been opened over the country, as the result of a wartime experiment here, in a field where the accent was formerly on bristly youth—the hotel business.

Men 65 years old and more, hired by the Roosevelt Hotel to replace youngsters called into military service, have done so well in nonstrenuous jobs that Seymour Weiss, the Roosevelt's managing director, has enthusiastically recommended the idea to more than 50 establishments in other States.

"We started it as a wartime measure but it's been so successful that we plan to make it a permanent policy," said Weiss. "Formerly it was thought old men had no place in a hotel."

They tried them on the elevators and they did fine from the start. Their presence brought plenty of favorable comment; people said it added dignity to the hotel.

"Recently an Army captain who had been superintendent of a large office building in Memphis stopped here. He was so impressed that he wired his association in Memphis to start hiring old men."

"The old boys did so well on the elevators that we've started using them on other jobs such as waitmen or roundsmen." They do better there than the young fellows did. They report everything they see and they don't miss a thing.

"We've had a number of complimentary letters. An 84-year-old retired college professor wrote in to say, 'God bless you for it.'"

Managers of between 50 and 80 office buildings have written to ask how it is working out.

When the elevator boys began getting scarce, the Roosevelt tried girls in their places. But the ladies were too quick to leave for better jobs and some of them objected to nightwork. Then they tried old men.

A large display advertisement in the local papers, calling for 20 elevator operators and warning that "no one under 65 years of age need apply," brought 250 applicants.

The hotel quickly filled its needs and placed many of the other men on a reserve list. Several of these have received jobs on the hotel's recommendation to other local employers who were replacing younger workers called to war.

Japs Deplete Stocks, Portugal Curb Buying

Lawrence Marques, Portuguese East Africa, Aug. 24 (P)—Portuguese authorities have placed severe restrictions on purchases by transients after the colony suffered a sudden shortage of supplies in the wake of the heavily-purchasing Japanese.

The next batch of Japanese soon to be exchanged for British and Allied nationals will not be allowed to take clothing, foodstuffs and medical supplies purchased here aboard ship. Neither will the British and Allies.

The "Bonaparte" is a mistake—So to it give the raul! You would have won a better break Had it been Doolittle; The Reich has done some probing and Has reached a verdict true: Is German of James so grand Is German through and through.

Your ancestors were Germans all; From our conclusion it's Most probable they used to call Your great-grandfather "Fritz" With early Teuton fighters you Are linked as by a bond; You may have dyed your hair dark blue But you were born a blond!

Just how you got to Corsica Still puzzles us a lot But we suspect the whole thing. Ja! Was just a Jewish plot; Your genius as a fighting lad Identifies your race; But you need be no longer sad—We put you in your place.

"Schnapoleon" would sound okay The last name "Bonaplat"—We much prefer your name that way.

And hope you'll like it lots: We would have known this long ago And borne the news to you But for one little doubt, you know . . . Concerning Waterloo!

The Data on Miami Beach. The impression that the beaches here have been barred to civilians from dusk to dawn is pure hokum. The true story is that an emergency curfew was imposed under which no civilian was permitted on the beaches after 9 p. m. They even posted guards on the causeways to Miami and stopped every car. Apparently they became aroused by the spy scare. After two days the restrictions were lifted and Miami Beach is now open at all hours.

The truth is that Miami Beach is doing its share of the war work and at the same time maintaining a resort where visitors can recuperate and rejuvenate themselves for the work ahead.

The Army has occupied only 122 of the 329 hotels in Miami Beach. The hotels occupied by the Army are all in the south section of the city below Thirtieth Street, leaving many new ocean front hotels and apartments available.

Free Transfer Hearings Set

Public hearings on the issuance of free transfers between the Capital Transit Co. lines and the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines will be held by the Public Utilities Commission tomorrow afternoon at 2 p. m. in the District Building.

The PUC said that both companies had agreed to honor the transfers, which are made principally at Barney Circle, near the John Philip Sousa Bridge, and at Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, near Minnesota and Branch Avenues Southeast. Previously the public had to pay an additional 2 cents to effect the transfer.

Interchange Of Art

By John W. White

Music Welds Mexico-U. S. Friendship

MUSIC is rapidly becoming the most important of all the various media being used to bring about a closer cultural relationship and, consequently, closer understanding and friendship between the people of Mexico and the United States. Largely as a result of the war, the governments of Washington and Mexico City have attained an unprecedented cordiality in their diplomatic and economic relationship through such prosaic and material measures as the purchase of minerals, the lending and leasing of airplanes, ordnance and other war equipment, and the liberal lending of American dollars for industrial development in Mexico. But there seems to be every indication that whatever progress is to be made in bringing the people of the two countries closer together will be largely the result of an active interchange in the least material of all the arts—music.

Much progress already has been made toward the desired objective and more progress is in sight. Speaking in baseball terms, Mexico has become the summer training camp for the American ballet, with the result that it has been included in what promises to be the most popular Mexican motion picture of the year. Recently a famous American conductor presented the premiere in Mexico of two symphonies by Mexican composers. Conversely, Mexico's famous conductor, Carlos Chavez, is featuring the music of American composers at the weekly concerts of the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico.

Senor Benito Cognet, the new director of Mexico's national theater in the Palace of Fine Arts here, is arranging to send three outstanding Mexican musicians to the United States this fall and winter and to bring three well-known American musicians to Mexico. And now the National Conservatory of Music announces a 1943 summer school for 300 students of music from the United States.

The high-light of this summer's season of Mexico's Symphony Orchestra was the appearance of Dmitri Mitropoulos, of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, as guest conductor at two Friday night and two Sunday morning concerts. In addition to receiving an almost unprecedented ovation (eight podium calls) for his magnificent presentation of well-known concert numbers at his first appearance, Mr. Mitropoulos made himself extremely popular with his Mexican audiences by playing for the first time a symphony composed by Hernandez Moncada, a member of the orchestra he was conducting.

At the next pair of concerts, Senor Chavez returned the compliment by presenting for the first time in Mexico Virgilio Thompson's Symphony No. 2. The Mexican orchestra gave a magnificent performance of Thompson's composition and it was applauded so enthusiastically that the conductor had to return to the podium several times to acknowledge the applause. Finally, Senor Chavez invited his orchestra to rise and share the ovation.

Thompson's music is becoming very popular with Mexican concert audiences and the famous Lener Quartet has been featuring several of his compositions in all the principal cities of Mexico during the year that they have been touring this country.

Another American visitor has been Dr. Frank Asper, organist of the Mormon Tabernacle of Salt Lake City, who was brought to Mexico City by the Society of Chamber Music for a series of organ recitals during which he played some of the most difficult music that has been written for the organ, including several of the Bach sonatas. He also played a recital before the organ and violin, the violin being played by Jenő Lener, founder of the string quartet which bears his name.

One of the most important features of this interchange of music has been the action of the Mexican government in financing the summer season of the famous Ballet Theater. This enabled Michel Fokine and Anton Dolin to prepare five new ballet numbers which will be presented before Mexico City, Guadalajara and Puebla audiences before the company begins its American season at the Metropolitan Opera House in October.

G. H. Dalrymple, New York manager, has just completed arrangements with Salvador Ordóñez, director of Mexico's National Conservatory of Music, for a summer school of music next year at which it is planned to enroll 300 students from the United States. Carlos Chavez will head the faculty, which will include the American organist, Dr. Frank Asper.

The summer course will open on June 15 and run for two months, with a two-hour period of study and instruction every day except Saturday and Sunday. The lectures will cover the history of Mexican and other Latin-American music, symphonic interpretation and other branches of higher musical instruction, including form, rhythm and composition. Students will be given free tickets to 12 Sunday morning concerts by the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico and there will be important works by Latin-American composers on each of the 12 programs.

At the end of the term, certificates of merit will be given to the American students who complete the course, and those who excel in their studies will be presented to the Mexican public as instrumentalists in a special concert which will be given for that purpose in the beautiful theater of the Palace of Fine Arts in Mexico City.

The director of the National Conservatory of Music expects that the 1943 summer school will be as successful as the one sponsored in 1941 by the music faculty of the National University of Mexico.

Hoyas' Rally Defeats Ft. Myer, 4 to 1

3 Runs in 8th Clinches 13th Tilt for G. U.

Pitcher Joe Wells Limits Soldiers To 6 Hits; Hoyas Collect 8 Blows

Georgetown scored its thirteenth victory of the season yesterday, defeating Fort Myer, 4 to 1, behind the effective 6-hit pitching of Joe Wells on the soldiers' diamond.

A three-run outburst in the eighth inning broke a 1-1 tie and enabled the Hoyas to win. Lindemann, allowing 8 hits, pitched for the losers. In that eighth frame Pitcher Wells opened the inning by walking, went to second on a sacrifice by Bonaforte and was moved to third when Smith grounded out to first. A wild throw by Catcher Scialawa allowed Wells to score.

Kulikowski was hit by a pitched ball and Gorygdeak's single sent him to third. Gorygdeak proceeded to second on the throw-in to third from the outfield. Both runners scored on a hit to right field by Murphy.

Georgetown threatened to score again in the ninth inning, but a triple play stifled the rally and retired the side. Hines and Hassett both singled, with Hines taking third on the latter's hit. Wells then lined a ball straight at Pitcher Lindemann, who snuffed it, threw to third to double up Hines, and Third Baseman Holman's slide throw to first got Hassett.

Fort Myer's lone run came in the third inning, when Story got on base on Gorygdeak's error and scored on Holman's long double.

Navy Stickmen End Season Winning, 16-4

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 26.—Navy's lacrosse team concluded its summer season today with a victory, defeating the Forest Park Athletic Club of Baltimore, 16 to 4.

The Middles had things all their own way throughout, scoring six goals in the opening stanza, five in the second and five in the final two periods. The triumph gave them a record of one victory and two defeats this summer.

Merrill Debuskey, Virginia grid star, got three of Forest Park's four goals, tallying twice in the second period and again in the fourth. Bob Mallonee tossed the other in during the opening frame.

Ken Gummerson, Navy inshore, led the Middles with four goals, all scored in the first period.

Mrs. W.H. Wise Golf Victor At Kenwood

Kenwood's women's golf committee was host to members and guests in a 3-4-5 tournament yesterday with Mrs. William W. leading the host club players in the "4's" class with five, Lois Gladling winning the "5's" with nine and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas the "6's" with a half dozen.

Mrs. W. F. Tompkins, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. P. J. Winkler, Congressional, tied with three "4's" among the guests while Mrs. William Flather, Chevy Chase, had six "5's" and Mrs. Grace Long, untied, and Mrs. F. H. Powell, Prince Georges, tied with eight "6's".

The 18-hole handicap medal play for the board of governor's trophy is listed for tomorrow at Kenwood, an intracub affair.

Ten days remain for the city's tournament playing golfers to file entries for the District Amateur championship, to be played September 9-10-11 at Congressional Country Club. Entries close September 7 at the host club with Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary.

The championship will be on the usual basis with qualifying Wednesday, September 9, two matches the next day and semifinals and finals September 11, all matches at 18 holes.

Doris Hart Captures Girls' National Net Championship

Doris Hart took the United States girls' tennis championship to Miami after a straight-set victory over Marcheta Donnelly, 18, of Venice, Calif., in the finals at Philadelphia Cricket Club.

17-Year-Old Miami High School Star Easily Turns Back Marcheta Donnelly

Philadelphia, Aug. 26.—Doris Hart, 17-year-old Miami High School star, won the girls' national tennis championship today with an easy 6-1, 6-3 victory over Marcheta Donnelly, 18, of Venice, Calif.

It was Miss Hart's fifth attempt to win the title. She made her first try at the age of 13.

The tall, slim Florida ace succeeds tournament at Forest Hills. Miss Louise Brough of Beverly, Calif., a favorite to win the women's national last year.

Congressional Golfers Near Top in Benefit

With Labor Day and the last of the Hale America golf tournaments for the benefit of the Red Cross less than two weeks away the United States Golf Association released unofficial figures on the first two tournaments yesterday and Congressional Country Club was fourth on the list for the National.

Over Memorial and Independence Day weekends the Congressional golf shop force, golf committee members and Red Cross workers took in $508, surpassed only by the Glen Oaks Club of Long Island, $805; Algonquin Club, St. Louis, $656, and Ekwanok, C. C. Manchester, Vt., $623.

The Country Club of Maryland, just outside Baltimore, was first in Maryland, Congressional being listed as a District club, with $400 while the Virginia leader was the Hermitage C. C. in Richmond with $138.

The U. S. G. A. had returns from less than half of the 900 clubs which subscribed to the drive and announced more than $50,000.

The third and final drive for Red Cross funds from the Nation's golfers will be Saturday through Monday, September 5-6-7, which will include Labor Day. Play will again be $1 entry fee with certificates to the low net and gross scorers. All proceeds will go to the Red Cross with 15 per cent to the local chapter and 85 per cent to the national.

Congressional committee members are hopeful of topping the $1000 mark for the three holiday events. A drive to interest more than 400 players over Labor Day would put them over the top.

Fort Hill Grid Coach Asks for Absence Leave

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 26.—John J. Long, director of athletics at Fort Hill High School and football coach, has applied to the Allegany County board of education for leave of absence to remain on the safety department staff of the Kelly-Springfield Engineering Co., which is making defense products.

Long, who is a graduate of Catholic University, has developed a strong team at the school. The matter is in abeyance.

Cannon Ball Scores Over Top Trotters

Milwaukee, Aug. 26.—The scramble for honors as top 3-year-old harness horse of the year became even more involved today as C. F. Benham's Cannon Ball beat both Colby Hanover, pre-Hambletonian favorite, and the Ambassador, Hambletonian winner.

The bay son of Guy Day won both heats of the 2-out-of-3 American stake race, defeating a field of 10, among them seven Hambletonian entries. The triumph netted his New York owner $4956.92. Blue Boy, a bay gelding, edged out The Ambassador for place money of $1982.77. Each finished second in one heat, but a break in the back stretch forced The Ambassador back to tenth place, while Blue Boy, on the break scoring in the second heat, managed to pull in ninth.

His Excellency outfooted the best for honors in the matron stake for aged trotters, with the favorite, Nible Hanover, in third place behind Britannic.

Atlantic Hanover made the fastest time of the meet in the 2:07 pace, stopping the clocks in 2:02 in the final trip. Hal Trim won the American stake for 3-year-old pacers.

Temple Rescinds Freshman Rule For the Duration

Philadelphia, Aug. 26.—Temple University, whose football squad has been riddled by enlistments and the draft, announced today it has rescinded the freshman rule for the duration.

Earl R. Yeomans, director of athletics, said the action was taken with reluctance.

He added that Temple's no-transfer rule was being retained and that under no circumstances would an athlete who had participated in either a varsity or freshman sport at another college or university be permitted to engage in intercollegiate athletics at Temple.

B. & O. Gross Up 7 Million For New Peak

By the Associated Press
Baltimore, Aug. 26.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported today operating revenues for July amounted to $26,996,294, more than seven million dollars better than July, 1941, and the highest of any month on record.

For the seven-month period ending July 31, 1942, the report continued, operating revenues increased $42,705,122 over totals for the same period of 1941.

The net income for the month of July, the report said, after providing for amortization of defense projects, accrual for Federal income taxes and fixed charges, including all interest, was $3,331,332, as compared with $2,619,436 in the same month last year.

The Outlook Petroleum or Alcohol? Oil Men vs. Farmer; Battle Goes on in Synthetic Rubber Program

(Third in a series of four articles)
The tale of Wacław Skukiewicz had all the elements of an international mystery thriller—except the beautiful blonde. The things that happened after Leon Henderson crossed the Pole's trail have been, says the hard-boiled price control man, "Of an E. Phillips Oppenheim nature" and it was really something of a governmental romance in a way.

The story had secret formulas for making synthetic rubber, spies and sleuths, invasion and hearache, hurried flight from home, diplomacy and the frenzied undercover battle of governments for a precious asset.

But it was all only part of this country's search for a way to make synthetic rubber needed to replace our dwindling stocks of natural rubber whose supply was cut off when the Japanese seized our Far East sources.

Late Earnings Statements

Sperry Co. and United States subsidiary today reported net income of $2,394,237, or $1.13 a common share, for the six months ended June 30, compared with $3,477,433, or $1.72 a share in the like 1941 period. The company, which manufactures precision instruments, said provision for Federal taxes was $1,380,254, against $923,037 in the comparable six months last year.

For War Study

Russian Students Due Here Today

Students from nations separated by vast theaters of war will begin to gather in Washington today for the International Student Assembly September 2 to 5, when student youth from the world over will discuss the problems of winning the war and postwar aims.

The Russian delegation of three members, the first to arrive, will be met at Union Station this morning by a committee of American students from colleges the country over, the International Student Service announced yesterday.

The Dutch delegation is expected to arrive this weekend. The British delegation hopes to fly here. Some delegates from warring nations will be in uniform, on leave from action on war fronts.

This is the first assembly to be held in this country, but the International Student Service, founded 22 years ago at Geneva where its international headquarters are situated, has held yearly assemblies in Europe since 1924.

Members of the Soviet delegation are Miss Liudmila Pavlichenko, Lt. Vladimir Pichelintsev and Nikolai Krasavchenko. The Polish delegation of two women and two men will include Konrad Lasek, 23, leader in Polish Catholic Youth Societies, and Corbi, Kazimierz Dzielinski, 25, who has been decorated with high Polish, Norwegian and French military awards for action in Poland and Norway. He lost a leg during the storming of the University of Chicago technical college. Dates of arrival of the Polish and other delegations are not definite yet.

Schools' War Parley Open Tomorrow

Head men of the Nation's war agencies will tell key officers of American education how the schools may best serve the country in the present crisis at a four-day conference opening tomorrow at American University.

Speakers at the Institute on Education and the War, arranged by the United States Office of Education Wartime Commission, will include Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army's Services of Supply; Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director; James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense; Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information; Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Price Administration; Harold Smith, director of the Budget; Claude Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture; Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor; and John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education.

Four major problems will be studied by the educators and Federal officials on the four successive days of the institute: Wartime demands for trained man power; war-time demands for volunteer service; adapting the curriculum to meet war needs and problems of finance, supply and transportation as they affect the proper functioning of the Nation's schools.

At the general sessions mornings and evenings, directors of war agencies will describe the objectives of their agencies and the cooperation which they seek from schools, colleges and libraries. Afternoon sessions will be devoted to symposiums in which educators and Government specialists will discuss the practical application of the suggestions made by the agency heads.

Priest Reports On Labor in Latin-America

Catholic achievements in the Latin-American labor field were praised yesterday by the Rev. Robert LeRoy, representative of the International Labor Office of Geneva, Switzerland.

Father LeRoy was interviewed at the Hamilton Hotel, where he is a Canadian delegate to the Inter-American Seminar on Social Relations, sponsored by the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Improvement of working conditions and raising of the general standard of living is being realized through Catholic social action centers, many of which are cooperating with the International Labor Office, according to Father LeRoy.

Much Catholic social action work in Latin America, he said, is centered in such organizations as the Economic and Social Secretariat, Buenos Aires, with branches throughout Argentina; the Matte de Cruchaga Social Service School in Santiago de Chile and Montevideo, Uruguay; the Catholic Young Workers' Organization in Colombia, and workers' clubs in Brazil.

In Canada, the International Labor Office branch has had frequent contact with the Christian Trade Unions in Quebec, and the People's Social School in Montreal, said Father LeRoy.

He said the National Catholic Welfare Conference is cooperating to an increasing degree with the International Labor Office, especially since the United States became a member of that office. The N. C. W. C. was set up in 1919 under the supervision of the American Catholic hierarchy and aims to unify, coordinate and organize Catholics of the United States in education, social action, immigrant aid, and other activities.

Collins Apparently Misses Third Try For Senate Seat

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 25.—Senator Burnet R. Maybank, friend and supporter of President Roosevelt, got an apparently safe majority over Eugene S. Blease today as late official returns were reported from yesterday's Democratic primary to name a United States Senator.

Blease, 65-year-old half-brother of the late Senator Cole L. Blease and former chief justice of South Carolina who presented himself as a campaigner for "white supremacy" was trailing Maybank by nearly 8000 votes with all but 85 of 1536 precincts accounted for.

In 1451 precincts, the vote stood, Maybank 112,517; Blease 106,735. Olin D. Johnston, Spartanburg lawyer, won the nomination as Governor, an office he held from 1935 to 1939. His opponent, Wyndham M. Manning, Sumter farmer and son of South Carolina's first World War Governor, Richard I. Manning, conceded defeat in his third consecutive try for the post. The vote in 1467 precincts: Johnston, 114,714; Manning, 104,285.

Three of the State's six Representatives in Congress who had opposition were renominated by big majorities on the face of nearly complete returns. They are Butler B. Hare in the Fifth District, J. P. Richards in the Fifth and John L. McMillan in the Sixth.

The nomination is equivalent to election.

Rep. Ross Collins Apparently Out of Race

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 26 (AP)—Representative Collins, 62-year-old veteran of Mississippi politics, apparently missed his third try for a Senate seat in yesterday's senatorial primary in Mississippi, when Senator Wall Doney again nosed him out by 1000 votes or so for second place, thus entering the runoff September 15 against former Senator James O. Eastland, who led by upward of 10,000 votes.

Only 81 small precincts missing, the latest unofficial tabulations gave Eastland 48,940, Doney 37,383, and Collins 36,047. Roland Wall polled 7504 votes and Douglas Smith 1220.

Five members of Congress were renominated, two without opposition. Representative A. L. Ford in the Fourth District conceded his defeat by 39-year-old Thomas G. Abernethy of Okolona and said he would enter the armed forces as soon as his term expired. Arthur G. Busby of Meridian and W. A. Winstead of Philadelphia will meet in a runoff in the Fifth District, vacated by Collins.

Those renominated were Representatives Rankin, Whitten, Whittington, Colmer and McGehee. Whitten and Whittington without a contest.

Seminar Hears Plan to Form Catholic Social Study Agency

By Robert Tate Allan

Post Church Editor

Proposals for a permanent Catholic agency to study social problems common to both North and South America were favorably received at yesterday's sessions of the Inter-American Seminar on Social Studies. Sessions are being held at the Hamilton Hotel under auspices of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. Delegates were escorted on a tour of Catholic University in the afternoon.

Bishop Miguel de Andrea, noted social welfare figure of Buenos Aires, Argentina, proposed a continuing commission of the current seminar which would develop into a "code of social principles" on economic and international ethics. The prelate's proposal, it was explained, will be referred to a committee on future plans.

The Very Rev. Felix Restrepo, S. J., rector of the Pontifical Catholic University of Peru in Lima, Bogota, Colombia, proposed an "Inter-American Correspondence School of Social Studies." It would be directed and conducted from Washington for clergy in Western Hemisphere countries.

Chief reason for such a school, according to Father Restrepo, is that Latin-American priests who formerly went to Europe for social studies now find these avenues of learning closed, and are coming to the United States for training. Presiding over the morning session was Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara of Kansas City, chairman of the N. C. W. C. department of social action. Bishop Miguel Darío Miranda of Tulancingo, Mexico, conducted the afternoon program.

Jury Exonerates Cab Driver in Death of Woman

A taxicab driver was exonerated yesterday of a negligent homicide charge in connection with the traffic death a year ago of a 53-year-old woman by a directed verdict of not guilty returned by a Municipal Court jury.

Ruling there was not sufficient Government evidence to show that the defendant, Louis Voron, 26, of 1407 Sixteenth Street Northeast, had driven carelessly, Judge Nathan R. Margold told the jury it must find the cab driver innocent.

The traffic victim, Mrs. Myrtle Jordan of Huntington, Va., died September 1, 1941, as a result of injuries she received when Voron's machine and the cab in which she was riding collided August 20 at Fourth Street and Washington Drive Northwest.

Representative Frank H. Buck (Democrat) was having a tough time against State Assemblyman Edward Cain for renomination on his own ticket and seemingly lost the Republican race to J. Leroy Johnson.

Representative A. J. Elliott, unopposed as a Republican, was running slightly ahead of V. V. Bowker for the Democratic position. During the campaign Elliott defended his vote in Congress against the fortification of Guam and against renewal of the reciprocal trade treaties.

Those safely renominated on their own tickets as well as on the ballot of the other major party included Representatives Lea (Democrat), Anderson and Gearhart (Republican) and John M. Costello (Democrat). H. Jerry Voorhis won Democratic renomination, but was trailing Robert P. Shuler in the Republican contest. Representative Thomas Ford, seeking only Democratic renomination, won easily.

U. S. May Buy Pea Crops From Mexico

Members of a Mexican commission sent to Washington to explore the possibility of selling that country's check pea crop to the United States as a food for American soldiers, as well as other troops of the United Nations, reported last night they were encouraged by the treatment accorded them here and hopeful that the sale could be successfully negotiated.

The check pea in prewar days was exported principally to Spain, but the commission said, but the five or six thousand farmers engaged in growing the food now find their market shut off with virtually no domestic demand for the product. They estimate the current crop, already harvested, at 60,000 tons.

The commission is headed by Ruben F. Morales, director general of the National Agricultural Credit Bank, and includes his brother, Roberto A. Morales, who is serving as secretary of the commission; Rafael Padilla Nervo and Alfonso Herrera Salcedo, who is representing the check pea producers.

The commission chairman, reporting conferences had been held with State Department, War Production Board, Commodity Credit Corporation and Agricultural Department officials, said the National Agricultural Credit Bank controls the greater part of the check pea crop and for that reason is interested in finding a sale. In addition, it controls about 80 per cent of the Mexican cotton crop. The chairman said he also was trying to negotiate an agreement under which the United States would buy the finer grades of cotton produced in Mexico.

The commission will go to New York today, expects to return early next week for further conferences.

2 Held by Police As Suspected Draft Dodgers

Two Negroes were held at the District Jail last night for questioning by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as draft dodgers. They were arrested by Second Precinct patrolmen Tuesday night and were turned over to United States marshals yesterday morning for transportation to the jail. No charges were placed against them by police.

Their arrest came about, it is understood, on information furnished by police by FBI. It is believed the arrests are the first of a city-wide drive to bring to justice those who have failed to register.

Sutherland's Widow Gets Bulk of Estate

The late George Sutherland, retired associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, left the bulk of his $100,000 estate to his widow, Mrs. Rose L. Sutherland of 2023 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, according to a petition for probate of his will filed in District Court yesterday.

The estate consists of about $12,000 in cash bank deposits, an automobile valued at $800, and the remainder in securities, whose exact worth has not been determined. No real estate was listed and there were no debts.

Under provisions of the will, dated November 7, 1940, bequests of $500 went to each of his two daughters, Mrs. Edith Sutherland Bloodorn of 4617 Hawthorne Lane Northwest and Mrs. Emma Sutherland Hempstead of Long Beach, Calif., who died a year ago, leaving two children. One of these, Henry William Lawrence, received $100, and two employees were left $500 each. The rest went to Mrs. Sutherland.

Justice Sutherland, who died July 18 at the age of 80, served on the Supreme Court bench from 1922 to his retirement in 1938. He had been appointed by President Harding.

The petition was filed by Attorneys John W. Cragun and George S. Elmore.

Turner Awarded PBA Contract

The Public Buildings Administration has awarded to Lee P. Turner, contractor of 3816 Fourteenth Street Northwest, a contract for $39,615 to build an additional story on the radio laboratory building at the Bureau of Standards, it was announced yesterday by PBA.

Dr. J. H. Dellinger, director of the radio section at the bureau, said the new story will accommodate expanded wartime radio work. The building, erected in 1917, will be of two stories with the addition.

Protests Filed Against OPA Price Orders

Two suits protesting OPA price orders were filed yesterday in the United States Emergency Court of Appeals, a special tribunal set up May 20 to hear appeals from OPA dismissals of complaints against maximum price regulations.

In one petition, the Buksa Coal Co. of Cincinnati, asked the court to set aside an OPA order fixing the price of bituminous coal shipped on the Ohio River. The firm contended that the order is unconstitutional, because it gives preference over Cincinnati to other ports on the Ohio.

The soft coal retailer also claimed that the price order to which it protested set a price higher than a maximum "which the price administrator, on April 28, in his judgment declared was more generally fair and equitable."

The second petition was filed by the Davies Warehouse Co. of Los Angeles, which claimed it is a public utility subject only to maximum prices ordered by the California Railroad Commission. As such, the petition stated, the firm could not be required to abide by two price ceilings.

These cases are the fourth and fifth to be brought to the court, which was established under provisions of the Emergency Price Control Act. Its judges are Fred M. Vinson, chief judge, and Albert M. Marks and Calvert Magruder, associate judges.

Brewers to Share In Tin Salvage

The War Production Board will issue an order, probably today, allocating to brewers and soft drink bottlers approximately half of all tin cans collected in salvage drives.

The bottlers will get the larger, more easily processed cans, with the Government taking the smaller cans plus the tops and bottoms of the larger cans.

As part of the agreement, the bottlers will use their facilities to step up the collection of cans.

Guardian of the Gates of Hell

OUR FLIERS called on a mechanism like this for help when American planes bombed Tokio. It gets a workout every time a U.S. bombardier sights his target.

It's a hydraulic power jack, made of aluminum alloy. Here's the chief job it does: when the plane nears the target, at the pilot's command the bombardier pulls a lever and the bomb bay doors open—through his bomb sight he sights the target, and lays his eggs smack on it—then he pulls the lever again, and the bomb bay doors close.

The aluminum in this mechanism is of vital importance. It must be strong and dependable to stand up under the powerful hydraulic action. Reynolds Metals Company produces much of the aluminum of which such vital parts are made today. It has to be good aluminum, because Reynolds makes it pass four rigid tests in addition to the searching tests the Government gives it. Aluminum of 99.85% purity is regularly coming from Reynolds plants.

Two years ago, Reynolds saw the need and expanded into the field of aluminum. Right now, Reynolds is turning out enough aluminum to build several hundred bombers a month—makes more aluminum than France and England together produced before the war.

Efficiency Ratings Lower This Year

A preliminary survey shows that efficiency ratings this year are running somewhat below the ratings of a year ago. Also, that there will be from 5 to 8 times as many appeals to the boards of review this year. This increase is accounted for by the appeals of employees who were given lower ratings this year despite the fact that their work, they believed, was as good or better than a year ago. In general, this year's ratings were expected to be lower under the new method of grading that was worked out by the Civil Service Commission.

Where the change was too great the ratings were sent back to the agencies for "re-examination" by department heads. This happened, for example, at Employment Service. A year ago at the service 11 per cent of the employees were graded excellent. This year only 3 per cent were rated excellent. However, some of the ratings have been boosted. In another department all the executives and supervisors were rated excellent. These ratings were sent back for re-examination and when they came back some were rated very good or good.

Treasury's Ratings Stable

Treasury's ratings ran about the same as they did a year ago. Ratings are said to run lower at Federal Works, Labor, War, Navy, Agriculture, Federal Security, Commerce, and most of the other agencies. Many believe that the increased number of appeals and the general dissatisfaction of employees who get lower ratings will force another change in the efficiency rating system. The new and more rigid system tried this year for the first time has met with constant criticism. The opposition got so hot that the commission ordered a last-minute optional amendment and the rating period which was interpreted as foreshadowing more drastic changes.

Federal Buildings Administration is headed for a period of retrenchment. Its monumental building operations are through for the duration and scores of employees in that line of work—architects, engineers and the like—will be laid off shortly. In fact, FBA officials are now trying to place employees to be laid off, in other Federal jobs. However, it's difficult to get a construction architect placed now in a time of no construction. Other construction agencies of the Government also face a virtual shutdown as WPA gets together with priorities. Much of National Housing's war housing program for which money has been appropriated may never be completed because of the shortage of critical materials. WPA already has cracked down hard on NHA and some WPAers believe that the time is coming soon when the construction will be stopped cold. NHA and its affiliated agencies—FHA, USHA, HOLC and the others—face a sharp curtailment of functions, but it may be three to six months before the ax starts to fall.

Jobs for Stenogs

Agricultural Marketing Administration needs stenographers and typists immediately. Apply at Room 2600, South Agriculture Building . . . Dick Ball, formerly of WPA, is acting chief accountant of Federal Works . . . Treasury's Procurement Division has made a number of important changes. A. J. Walsh, who has spent 26 of his 44 years in the procurement field, has been promoted to deputy director. He'll specialize in lend-lease purchases. Paul King has been promoted to personnel director. Clarence O. Saylor has been moved up to chief of purchases to succeed J. W. Reed, who was made a member of the Contract Board of Review. Charles F. Hughton is the new chief of the administrative division.

Lynn H. Cozad is personnel director of the Office of Defense Transportation. He came here from the Los Angeles Civil Service Commission . . . Thomas Dunn will be in charge of the fourth district suboffice of the Civil Service Commission that's being set up here. The headquarters office was moved to Winston-Salem . . . The shortage of typists and stenographers here has become so critical that a number of agencies are now training people for the jobs . . . Many former Federal employees who are now retired are willing to go back into the service for the duration, but few are being used. Each agency now has full authority to call back retired workers.

"The Merry Widow" came back to Washington last night to re-thrill the hundreds of lovers of Franz Lehar's irresistible musical romances, playing to a capacity first-night audience at the Water Gate. Slightly modernized but with the same nostalgic tunes that have won acclaim for more than three decades, "The Merry Widow" retained its place in the hearts of Washingtonians as one of the truly great operettas of all time. And so long as its golden music is sung by such performers as Helen Gleason and Robert Shafer, there will be new enthusiasts to perpetuate "The Merry Widow" in American theaters. It was sold at the Water Gate last night, but it could have snowed and there would have been filled seats. "Villa," "When I Go to Maxim's," the exciting "Love in My Heart," and the old favorite, "Merry Widow Waltz," were acclaimed as ever. More than singers, Helen Gleason and Robert Shafer are actors. Once scornful of love but gladstone lovers at last, they guide their roles into the sparkling romantic world about which they sing. And the voice of Frank Homaday as Camille de Jolidon gives great support. Bumbling, ridiculous "Baron Popoff," played by Detmar Pappen continued to "lay 'em in the aisles" with cracks that are getting as musty as the family album. The brightest spot of humor was the septet dance, "Women," by Popoff, Raymond Baine as St. Brice, Prince Danilo, Vance Riffe as Casca, Florence, Vance as Nish, Alex Alexander as Khadja and Raymond Pachen in the role of Novakovich. D. C., Detroit Bar Units Win Merit Award

An award of merit for outstanding contributions to public service and modern law practice was jointly conferred yesterday on the Bar Associations of the District of Columbia and Detroit, it was announced by the American Bar Association, now meeting in the Michigan city. The formal honor, awarded annually, was accepted in behalf of the local Bar Association by Paul B. Cromelin, president; Wilbur L. Gray, secretary; and Walter M. Bastian, Section Chair and Henry I. Quinn, delegates. The activities of the District Bar Association, recognized as outstanding and deserving of award, were prominently connected with furthering the war effort. They include the organization of the first committee on national defense, in which 350 lawyers were engaged in Selective Service and Civilian Defense work, a committee on Soldiers and Sailors relief which handled 219 cases in 18 months, and the organization of a speakers bureau to foster District war savings. They also compiled the first country-wide reports on blackout laws. As contributors to the profession, District lawyers launched a campaign of more than 70 barristers for defense of the poor accused of crime, inaugurated statutory reorganization in lower courts, and compiled a manual of jury instructions. For public enlightenment they instituted broadcasts on legal topics, employed special lawyers to assist indigent persons in court, and inaugurated other services designed to aid the layman in defense of his civil rights.

But Tires Are Gone Ex-Policeman Retrieves Own Stolen Auto

Joseph E. Kinney, who several years back was the D. C. police auto squad's ace stolen car retriever, put his experience to good use yesterday. Recently commissioned a captain in the Army, Kinney looked out a window of his home at 3820 Sixteenth Street Northwest on Tuesday to find his car missing. Yesterday, while driving to Baltimore to wind up some business as supervisor of the Washington field office of the Immigration division, Department of Justice, he entered the Army, Kinney spotted his stolen auto parked on the Baltimore Boulevard near College Park. He was a bit late, however; the car had been stripped of its tires and virtually everything else that wasn't nailed down. Kinney was retired from the police force in 1935 after another policeman had mistakenly shot him, believing him to be a hold-up suspect for whom Kinney was lying in wait. He had served as a policeman for 12 years.

Police Quiz Bookmakers In Beall Hunt

The search for Capt. Lawrence R. Beall, chief clerk of the Police Department who disappeared Friday and is suspected of taking "something more than $5000" in official funds, included questioning of local bookmakers yesterday. Detectives admitted that several well-known bookies who accept race horse bets had been approached in an effort to learn the identity of a man who telephoned Beall at his office Friday night. So far, it was said, none of the gamblers has admitted any connection with Beall, who was exposed as a "rabid race horse bettor" after his disappearance. The mysterious telephone call was regarded by police officials as the "only tangible lead" in the investigation. Beall, who has not been seen since he left his wife to go to his office Friday night, removed the telephone receiver from its cradle during the night, according to a police telephone operator, and later spoke to her.

Man Called About 9 P. M.

The operator said she had received a call about 9 p. m. and that a male voice asked for Beall's extension number, not for him by name. The caller also said to the operator, "I know he's there." Each time she rang the phone, she said, the receiver was removed from the hook, breaking the connection. Later the operator stated she called Beall's line herself, and he answered, saying, "I don't want to speak to anyone. No one knows I'm here except my wife." Auditors already have uncovered shortages of over $5000. They have not completed their investigation of the captain's accounts.

Foul Play Belief Discounted

Last night the majority of police officers and detectives scoffed at reports that Beall possibly met with foul play. Hart this being so, had he been followed from his office, they said—his automobile when it was found abandoned, hardly would have been locked. They reasoned that if he had been attacked and forcibly removed from his car while on his way home, his assailants would not have taken time to lock the car. It was learned that an attorney attempted to obtain $300, residue of an estate, from the chief clerk's office Friday afternoon. The lawyer said he had been put off and that the money apparently was unavailable.

Nurse Gets $22,605 in Hospital Case

Insurance Carrier Settles Judgment In District Suit Creating Precedent

The 8-year-old case of Susan Hughes versus Georgetown Hospital—in which the United States Court of appeals broke a century-old tradition by holding Washington's charitable institutions liable for damages arising out of their employees' negligence—ended yesterday with payment of the $20,000 judgment in Miss Hughes' favor. Plans to contest the decision in the Supreme Court have been abandoned, it was indicated by counsel for the hospital.

Attorney Emmett Leo Sheehan, who represented the 64-year-old former nurse during the long litigation, said his client had received from the hospital's insurance carrier a check for $22,605.71, which includes costs and interest. On October 29, 1934, Miss Hughes was struck in the back by a door swung open by a student nurse in a corridor of the hospital. Miss Hughes was not a member of the hospital staff, but a private nurse on special duty. She brought action against Georgetown Hospital and a District Court jury found in her favor, April 18, 1940. Reviewed in the United States Court of Appeals, the lower court's decision was upheld by the full six-man tribunal. The 23-page opinion, written by Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge, overruled the hospital's contention that under an ancient legal principle hospitals and charitable organizations were immune from damage suits instituted by persons not connected with them. Attacking the soundness of such a custom, the court held there should be no distinction between the liability of charitable institutions and that of individuals.

Monkey Loose In Arlington Shot to Death

Pete, the mischievous monkey of Mackays Hill, found permanent freedom yesterday—in death. And it probably was as much a relief to him as it was to the two Arlington, Va., policemen who poured two 12-gauge shotgun charges and two bullets from a high-powered .22-caliber rifle into his tortured carcass.

Policemen Walter Kadel and H. S. Willett had been scouring the fields and woods full time for the last two days in the vicinity of Rosslyn on orders of Police Chief Harry Woodward. Residents of the neighborhood had complained that they were terrorized, and there wasn't anything else for Chief Woodward to do. "Thank the Lord it's over," said Willett, writing this to the six-day saga of the simian search. Ever since Pete ran away Thursday from the home of his owner, Chinn Farling, on the Potomac near Rosslyn, poster had been on his trail. Reports circulated that Pete had bitten somebody, that he was chasing residents up Rosslyn Road, that he was peeping in people's windows, that in general he was terrorizing the populace. So Chief Woodward assigned Kadel and Willett to spend all of their time while on duty looking for him. Kadel sighted the monkey about 10:30 a. m. yesterday beside a ravine near Ode Street and Colonial Terrace, and shot at him with his shotgun. But Pete got away. Then, about 2 p. m., Kadel found his quarry sitting down in the ravine. He shot twice again, and Willett finished the beast off with two bullets from his rifle.

D. C. Drive Begins

PIN FOR ROPER—Rima Rene, head usherette, pins a Russian War Relief pin on Daniel C. Roper, who spoke at last night's Aid Russia Rally

Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, last night warned a capacity audience attending the Russian relief rally at the Jewish Community Center, that "human liberty was never confronted with a more sinister and devastating challenge than is presented by our enemies in this world-war struggle," and urged them to support the cause by pledging contributions. "Great economic and social changes will result from this conflict, and many adjustments will have to be made," cautioned Roper. "Let us see that in these adjustments justice and righteousness prevail, and that after we win the war we will find ways of forever protecting our people from Hitlerism."

Roper Praises Russians

In praise of the Russians, he continued: "They are vital spearheads for us. They are fighting with us and for us. To win this war, we must act as a spearhead for them here in furnishing all kinds of supplies, including medical supplies through Russian Relief. With you, I say, it must not happen here. We must abandon indifference and cooperate in every way with our Allies in spite of sacrifices." The rally was a part of the local drive to raise $100,000 in the National-wide appeal for six million dollars. Entertainment was furnished by soloists from the Columbia Light Opera Co. and a string ensemble. Phyllis Schwartz, youngest soloist ever to appear with the National Symphony Orchestra, was given several ovations for her operatic renditions.

Douglas Pictures Flight

Prof. Paul Douglas, president of American University, summarized recent world conflict from the Russian revolution to the rape of China, and said that the "present generation of young people throughout the world have grown up in post-war despair, economic catastrophe and class and national hatred." He added that "if a normal existence is to be attained . . . we must bring our interests together."

Conditions in Nazi Europe were graphically depicted by Dr. Hugo Schiff, head of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, who said that conditions in Nazi Germany were "much worse than depicted." The speakers were introduced by Irving Gold.

12 D. C. Women Among First To Get Navy Pay Allowance

The Navy mailed checks yesterday to 198 dependents of enlisted men, including 12 Washington area women, the first beneficiaries to receive payments under the Servicemen's Dependents and Allowance Act.

Lucy Elizabeth Manz 2137 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Va., Alfred Herman Manz, seaman first class; Florence Virginia von Haden 908 South Oak Street, Arlington, Va., Robert Louis von Haden, yeoman third class, and Madeline Hocking, Colonial Beach, Va., Claudius Bertman Hocking, aviation ordnance man third class.

Lack of Witness Invalidates Will Of Guy L. Wonders

A will made on office stationery by Guy L. Wonders, theater chain manager, who jumped to his death August 9 from the seventh floor of the Earle Building, was declared invalid in District Court yesterday because it had not been written in the presence of witnesses. The document, drawn up nine days before Wonders' suicide, named as sole heir a daughter, Mrs. Theda Wonders Porter, of Bethesda, Md. Wonders, who was 57 and lived at 4306 Stanford Road, Bethesda, was District manager for the Warner Brothers Theaters in Maryland. He listed a bank account and some life insurance among his possessions, but no estimate of the estate will be made until it is admitted to probate.

Trio Held In Theft of Gas Books

5000 Reported Stolen From Jackson School; Police Reveal One Was Sold for $50

Three men were held by police last night in connection with the theft of 4500 gasoline rationing books, which they were reported to have been selling for as much as $36 a book.

One of the suspects, a 44-year-old steamfitter who lives in Petworth, was said by police to have admitted theft of the books from the Jackson School, Thirtieth and R Streets Northwest. They said he surrendered more than 3000 of them to the detectives following his arrest.

The other two men were held for selling books which they claimed were purchased from other parties. Both of the latter made sales to detectives Tuesday afternoon, it was said.

Detective Sergt. William G. Fawcett and George L. Saunders, assisted by Secret Service and OPA agents, were assigned to the case immediately after the theft of the books, August 6.

They reported that they obtained information that an individual was selling books and made a buy from him. After his arrest he said he purchased the books from another man. This process continued through 30 men before the trio now in custody were reached.

Fawcett and Saunders Tuesday bought an S book, they said, from one of the three and paid him $36 in marked bills for it. When arrested, it was stated, the seller identified himself as the son of a well-known local second-hand dealer.

The steamfitter denied any knowledge of the books when first arrested, but continued questioning broke him down, police said. Then, they reported, he took the investigators to his home and showed them where he had hidden the books in his cellar in an old suitcase after he had broken into the school through a window.

No count had been made of the books last night, but it was estimated the suitcase contained more than 3000 A, B, C and S books. About 40 other books from which the serial numbers had been removed had been recovered by previous arrests.

The three last night were also being questioned in connection with similar thefts from the rationing board at the Petworth School.

5 Face Jury Action in Tire Stealing Ring

Five men were ordered held for the grand jury yesterday by Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon in connection with an investigation of what police believe is a ring of stolen tire dealers.

Officers of the Ninth Precinct uncovered the alleged tire thefts and sales following the arrest August 19 of Leon Carlton Wright, 18, Negro, of 228 N. Irving Street Northwest, in the theft of an automobile that day at Third and M Streets Northeast.

Since then, eight men—five white and three Negroes—have been charged with conspiring in the scheme. One has been turned over to Maryland police to answer charges there, and another, who is 16 years old, has been referred for juvenile court action.

Eight Cars Recovered

A total of 8 automobiles and 11 tires, tubes and wheels have been recovered, according to Detective Carl L. Hayden, of No. 9, who worked on the case for a week with Detective George T. Stanton and Private Nunzio Bonaccorso.

Those arraigned yesterday, and the charges are: David Sherman Breeden, 28, of 1109 Penn Street Northeast, charged with receiving stolen property and held for the grand jury under $1000 bond; Edwin W. Collins, 29, of 2504 Twenty-eighth Street Northeast, receiving stolen property and held under $1000 bond; LeRoy Franklin James, 30, of 1287 Brentwood Road Northeast, receiving stolen property, held under $1000 bond; Warren Albert Anderson, 19, Negro, of 813 Eighth Street Northeast, grand larceny, under $2000 bond; John Thomas Deans, 18, Negro, of 1104 Eighth Street Northeast, grand larceny, under $2000 bond, and Wright, who is charged with unauthorized use of an automobile and held under $2000 bond.

Detective Hayden indicated the charges in some instances would be multiplied when the case is presented next week to the grand jury.

James Go-Between

According to Hayden, James, who is the oldest, acted as go-between in the sale of the tires. He was known to the others only by the name of "Jesse," and the transactions were conducted by telephone, the detective said. The allegedly stolen cars were taken to outlying sections of the city, Hayden said, and stripped. Some of the tires were recovered from the homes of a few of the boys and others from cars owned by Breeden and Collins.

The defendants, arraigned separately in the United States branch of Municipal Court, pleaded innocent to the charges. Assistant United States Attorney John L. Ingoldby, Jr., represented the Government.

Pinned by Fallen Tree 6 Days, Farmer Lives

Prairie Grove, Ark., Aug. 26 (AP).—Pinned for six days beneath a fallen tree in the sparsely settled woods of northern Adair County, Okla., a 63-year-old farmer is recovering under a physician's care.

The farmer, Kenneth Wallace, chopped down a tree August 17. It pinioned him as it fell. He chewed what wild grapes he could reach, and sucked leaves for moisture. A searching party found him.

Allies Preparing to Invade Tunisia

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Rome correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve said today that reports of Allied concentrations of transports and warships at Gibraltar and West African ports were current in Italy, where they were interpreted as possible preparations for opening a second front.

The correspondent said that "these considerable concentrations," according to views held in Rome, might be intended as reinforcements for Atlantic convoys, "but it is also thought possible that they are destined for use in a surprise attack in the Mediterranean basin similar to that at Dieppe."

The correspondent said Italians are pointing to French Tunisia as "the most exposed point" in the Mediterranean and asserting that "Anglo-Saxon enterprises against French possessions have succeeded very well." (The reference presumably is to the occupation of Syria.)

The writer said an Allied attack on Tunisia would put Allied forces at the back of the Axis armies in Egypt.

Mrs. Lowry, General's Wife, Dies in Colorado

Boulder, Colo., Aug. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Parkhill Lowry, wife of Brig. Gen. Sumter deLeon Lowry of Jacksonville, Fla., died in a Boulder hospital yesterday. She had been a patient there a month.

General Lowry arrived by plane yesterday and left today with the body for Tampa, Fla. A son, Sumter deLeon Lowry 34, and a daughter, Ann Parkhill Lowry, both of Florida, also survive.

That Impractical Wedding Gift

The War Bride Can't Take It With Her

This swanky sewing basket, complete from thimble to scissors, is one of the things Mrs. Bryant decided was necessary to take with her. The Boston Cooking School Cookbook and America's Housekeeping Book were also other possessions she deemed necessary for a novice homemaker. For information concerning source of sewing basket and books, call National 4200, Extension 259.

By Martha Elynn

The war bride can't afford the luxury of indecision. The ceremony over, she often finds that in a few days—or hours—that she will whisk away with her groom to their new home near the base to which her husband has been assigned in the armed forces.

So with an eye to their future home, which may be for only a few weeks or months, she must decide which of her possessions will be necessary.

Wedding presents have a way of covering wide territory. Many of the gifts are the very things she has been wishing for all her life. It's quite a temptation to say, "Send them all along to me."

Silver pheasants, crystal glasses, jade lamps and a host of beautiful things are among her gifts. She is just itching to have all of these treasures. But will they fit into her new surroundings? Are they necessary for her new way of life?

Mrs. Harry Robert Bryant, who was Miss Elizabeth Jane Wickard, daughter of Secretary and Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, until her marriage last Saturday to Ensign Bryant, United States Navy Reserve, had to do some quick choosing of the things she would need when she left with her husband for his base at Boston, Mass.

Can't Take It With Her

"Oh, if I could only take all of my lovely things with me," Betty exclaimed when looking at her many wedding gifts.

"What will you take? I asked her.

"My sewing box, an electric iron, and a cookbook," she answered with a twinkle in her eyes. Then she added that her flat silver, some linens, perhaps a vase, and a few pictures would be among the necessities she would have in her new home.

The decision of this bride is one that any war bride who is likely to move on from one place to another, as her husband is transferred in the service, would do well to consider.

Sewing to Be Done

Even if she does not make her own clothing, there are always buttons to sew on, socks to be darned and perhaps a uniform that needs the touch of the needle.

An iron is also an indispensable item. Uniforms must be spic and span with nary a wrinkle. Dresses must be neat to go walking with uniformed men. Hankies, lingerie and many other things are always needing to be ironed. Perhaps in these times when everyone is more or less on their own, she will be doing the household laundry. Such things are happening regularly.

Remember Cook Book

And very few brides overlook the idea that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. She has reached his heart in some way—perhaps not through good

Mrs. Harry Robert Bryant, the former Elizabeth Jane Wickard, daughter of Secretary and Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, was married last Saturday to Ensign Bryant, U. S. N. R. Before she left for her new home in Boston she decided the most necessary home-making items to take with her cooking—but you can bet she won't miss the bet of staying there through any lack of good food.

If anyone is wondering what to give a bride as a shower gift, they might consider some of the fully equipped sewing baskets I have seen in the shops. Or look over the cookbooks that are available in the bookstores and book-sections of the department stores.

Should you want any advice as to just where to find these practical gifts for the brides, call National 4200, Extension 259.

Chicken Chat

Table Tips to Keep in mind about chicken, from the U. S. Department of Agriculture: Chicken is a perishable food and should be kept cold when it is raw. Eat it quickly after it is cooked. Chill it right away if you do not intend to eat it at once. When you bring a dressed chicken home, wash it thoroughly inside and out, pat it dry, store it in your coldest storage place until you cook it.

Make-up Changes

There are ways of correcting nose problems by means of make-up, points out Perc Westmore, Hollywood make-up expert.

"By no means does the long nose present the only problem," says Westmore. A very short nose may throw the entire face out of balance, and a very broad nose may give an otherwise pretty face a feeling of heaviness.

"Now a long nose is a very fine feature, indicating intelligence and will power. But, lest it make your face appear too harsh or severe, foreshorten its length by plucking the eyebrows back just a trifle away from the nose (not too far). Use a darker powder base and powder on the nose. Do not apply your rouge too close to the nose.

A very short nose, particularly if it is tilted at the tip, is extremely feminine, but its shortness should not be accentuated. Powder a short nose first, using lighter powder, with darker powder over the remainder of the face.

Hollywood Looking Glass

BETTE DAVIS has her own pet way of hanging onto that last silver of soap. When a bar of soap dwindled to a nonusable size, she neatly grafts the piece onto a new bar.

ANN SHERIDAN gives us a hint for saving on face creams. Ann says that a thick layer of cream does no more work than a thin one, so economize with a light coating.

GERALDINE FITZGERALD, also in "The Gay Sisters," tells us that properly washed brushes last longer. She washes hers in mild soap and lukewarm water, rinses them in warm water with a couple of drops of ammonia, rinses again in cold water.

MILO ANDERSON has quite a reputation among the Hollywood's players for putting the unexpected note of trim on their costumes. Young Joan Leslie, star of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," thought she would pull a rib on Milo when she brought some old garter fasteners in to him for a new trimming feature. Milo turned the tables on her—the garters now grace a sports dress he had designed. He lacquered the knob part of the clasp in bright red, stitched the chrome part on the dress with matching red yarn. Voila! One of the neatest button trims to date! And Milo did thank Miss Leslie—and that wasn't a gag.

PERT JANE WYMAN says that the gods are truly on her side. Her husband, Lieut. Ronald Reagan of the Army Air Force, has been transferred to a post right in Hollywood. Now Jane and Ronnie are able to enjoy their new Hollywood hills home together with their young child.

Incidentally, when Ronnie was asked what type of architecture his home followed, he said, "Oh, it's just comfortable Reagan." That's Ronnie's term, but it is patterned after an old English farmhouse.

Suffragettes Recall Hard Fight

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

"Mr. President:
It is unjust
To Deny Women
A Voice in Their Government
When the Government
Is Conscripting
Their Sons."

THESE WORDS blatantly printed in bold letters on a big yellow banner struck a familiar note to many of the members of the National Woman's Party, who had borne similar ones in the suffrage parade picketing the White House during President Wilson's Administration.

The occasion of the remembrance and viewing of the old banner was the National Woman's Party's celebration yesterday commemorating the twenty-second anniversary of the ratification of woman's suffrage. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the National Woman's Party, wouldn't be a bit surprised if that weren't the militant banner she waved when she marched up and down Pennsylvania Avenue and on to the White House in her clamor for woman's suffrage. In fact, the banner was brought in at the last minute by Otto C. Housechild, assistant corporation counsel in the D. C. Police and Traffic Courts. It had been in the archives of the Police Court since it had been snatched from some marching, fighting suffragette's hand during World War I. Return of the banner yesterday provoked recollections of the tribulations, jailings and sufferings of the early leaders in the equal-rights movement.

Commemorating the twenty-second anniversary of women's enfranchisement, the National Woman's Party yesterday held a gala celebration at the Alva Belmont House. Mrs. Walter J. White (left) as Mrs. Martha C. Wright and Miss Mathilde Bahar as Elizabeth Cady Stanton scattered a bit of propaganda for woman suffrage air of verisimilitude were the Quaker costumes that had been worn by some of the Washington suffragettes in the march on the White House. As a memory brusher, Mrs. Robert Walker of Baltimore wrote and presented a sketch depicting the birth of the woman's rights movement, preceding the Seneca Falls, N. Y., convention in 1848. Mrs. Nell Frear depicting the character of Mary McClintock and Mrs. Mildred Palmer portraying Lucretia Mott, Miss Matilda Bahar as Elizabeth Cady Stanton reenacted the scene of the "Declaration of Women's Rights" that took place in Mrs. McClintock's parlor.

Mrs. Dora G. Ogle, house director, found an old trunk and dug out the Quaker costumes that had been worn in the suffrage parade here for the characters in the skit. By the way, Mrs. Ogle is one of the early picketers. "We don't have to picket now," she said. "We just walk right into the Congressmen's office and present our case first hand."

"Although I have admired always the courageous women who picketed, marched and went to jail for the cause," said Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, chairman of commemoration days, "I just couldn't have done that myself. I had to wait until I could work more quietly."

Always mindful of the present purpose of the party—the adoption of the equal-rights amendment—Mrs. Harvey in her speech yesterday said:

"As we meet to celebrate the twenty-second anniversary of the proclamation of the woman's suffrage amendment, we are happy to be able to mark another milestone in the great struggle for equality between men and women. The War Labor Board has received recommendation, which if adopted, will equalize the wages of men and women engaged in interstate commerce."

However, she warned that there is no permanency in such a situation because the board that equalizes wages can later create differentials and therefore the need of the immediate adoption of equal rights amendment, which would make such a governmental policy permanent, is as pressing as ever.

An incident that further brought home to the guests events of early struggles was the presentation of a red and white satin marshal's staff. Maj. Gouverneur Hoes presented the memento in honor of his mother. According to Mrs. Hoes' own handwriting the staff had been carried by her, fifth in line in the suffrage parade, mobbed on Pennsylvania Avenue. By Mrs. Hoes' side in that eventful parade was her younger son, Lawrence Hoes, who now resides with his wife and young son, Randall, in Chevy Chase.

This banner was actually used by the suffragettes when picketing the White House. Mrs. Nell Frear represents Mrs. Mary McClintock and Mrs. Mildred Palmer Lucretia Mott

When Mother Is a Working Woman—

WHO'S TO TAKE CARE OF THE BABY?

By Marguerite Wright

Have you ever tried to teach a 17-year-old youngster to be a mother in two easy lessons?

That's what one Government clerk I know was doing yesterday and today. And, if you're a mother and are living in Washington, that's what you have done or will try to do some day in the future.

For although Washington hasn't put a ban on its residents having families, it is falling far behind other defense cities in making arrangements to aid working mothers.

And today, particularly in Washington, mothers must work. Junior needs his milk and orange juice, his dummies and bibs, and a roof over his head. So, unless dad is in the upper bracket of Government workers, mom has to turn her hand toward keeping the home fires burning. And Junior has to get along on the few odd moments she has left before and after her eight hours at the office.

They Are Needed

Washington needs these women, too. Already Government hiring agencies are having difficulties in finding enough people to fill wartime jobs here. Already an attempt is being made to discourage persons who live here and work in Government agencies from moving elsewhere. And as many jobs as possible are being filled by local residents to prevent further overcrowding of the already overcrowded city.

But, although everyone is being urged to do her part in seeing that Uncle Sam's homework is done, no centralized system of providing responsible care for the children who are left motherless for eight hours every day has been set up.

A year or so ago such a program would probably have been a needless expense. But with the mobilization of all available workers the need is becoming more and more acute.

Now that the Army has announced that even husbands and fathers will be drafted sometime during the coming year and that there will be no special assistance for their wives, more and more women will be returning to work.

Already hundreds of children of preschool age are being left in the care of servants who are neither too well trained nor too interested in the welfare of their small charges. They are failing to get the day-to-day training that either a mother or a specially trained nurse would give.

If mother worked, who would look after him?

them. Their health may not suffer, but it certainly doesn't benefit from the slap-dash care dished out by a maid who may know nothing of children beyond that knowledge imparted by the child's mother in a few days of training.

This is war and we have no room in our wartime economy for illness. Nor do we have any room for the social problems which arise when small boys and girls run wild because of the lack of supervision.

Moreover, the lack of responsible child care is already proving expensive to Government agencies. Mothers who are worried about their children do not produce as much work or work of as good quality as do employees who have no worries about the state of affairs at home.

A child who is ill through the negligence or the ignorance of a maid draws its mother away from her defense job and piles up expensive leave for the defense agency. And when a maid quits and another must be trained, there is more leave which may result in delay in important war work.

An organized nursery, where mothers could "park" their offspring when they go to work and feel that the child would be perfectly secure until they call for them at the end of the day, is a perfectly workable idea.

The Office of Civilian Defense has begun such a project. But it needs volunteers to assist in the program and facilities with which to work. Many cities in defense production areas have already started such a program and even factories have found it profitable. The latest example is that of an aircraft factory in California which has opened a nursery where mothers may buy responsible care for their children for less than a dollar a day.

Washington mothers, too, would be glad to pay for such a program, for the cost of maintaining a child in a well-planned and well-operated nursery should be less than the present slipshod manner of hiring servants.

In fact, the present method is so expensive and so unsatisfactory that many office workers are going to bundle up Junior and run home to mother for the duration—thus losing to Washington and the Government a large group of very badly needed workers.

Will Your Boy Be Injured In High School Football?

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

IF YOU HAVE a boy entering high school this fall and you let him play football, the chances are 100 per cent he will get bruised up somewhat during the season.

The chances are 1 to 4 that he will receive an injury sufficiently serious to lay him up.

The chances are 1 to 5 that he will receive a permanent injury that will last through life—ranging from some front teeth out, a flattened nose, a fracture around a joint that will leave a stiff joint for life, or a cartilage dislocated from a knee, or a fractured pelvis.

The chances are about 1 in 1000 that he will be killed.

The chances are about 1 in 10,000 that he will have to have a leg amputated.

The chances are very remote, but I know of two cases, that he will be blinded for life.

In college these chances are about halved. The college player has more mature bones, better protective equipment and is a little more wary. That is why I think football should be prohibited for high school students until at least the senior year.

These statements are made on the basis of a Nation-wide clipping service that I began to subscribe to last September. I by no means claim they are complete.

If you think I exaggerate, let me quote the report of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council for the year 1941: "One out of every three football players is injured each year. Based on a five-year survey, 100,000 such injuries cost American parents one million dollars annually. Between 80,000 and 75,000 boys are temporarily crippled each year and 1,225,000 school days are lost through injuries."

I have records of 23 deaths last year from football injuries—one in college, 14 in high school and 8 on sandlots.

The coaches don't like these figures. One of them wrote a very sarcastic article about me last year. The next day one of the players on his team was killed by injury during the game. When interviewed, the coach said that such things constituted only a small percentage, considering how many players of football there were in the country. That should have been a great comfort to the dead boy's parents.

But the coaches ought to be careful themselves. There is considerable occupational hazard to being a football coach. Two last year died of heart failure during the game. These were those fellows who had built up such a fine physique through a lifetime of athletics. We all hear football is so good for the health.

I have a record of 11 coaches who suffered injuries as serious as broken bones, or worse, while teaching their pupils how to protect themselves.

Three games in 1941 were called off because one or the other team had injured so many players in action that they could not muster 11 whole men who could stand on their feet.

First V-Letter Received in Capital

"V-letters" look much like ordinary mail, Mrs. Homer Trimble, 416 North Kenmore Street, Arlington, discovered from the first one she received from her husband, a major with the Army Air Force in Australia.

MAJ. TRIMBLE

What is important, Mrs. Trimble thinks, is not how they look but that she gets them.

And what is still more important, she adds, is for more "V-letters" to be written, headed the other way, to American soldiers could send and receive fronts.

"V-letters" were invented so soldiers could send and receive mail by air, and were first used two years ago, for the benefit of British soldiers in the Near East. The letters themselves never leave the foreign headquarters. But photographs of them five-eighths of an inch square—do, by plane. This way, a whole sack of mail goes into a roll of film the size of a spool of thread.

Nobody reads the letters.

A machine photographs them at 100 a minute, and in the United States another machine reproduces them from the film, also at the rate of 100 a minute.

The letter received by Mrs. Trimble was one of the first consignment from American soldiers in Australia. Major Trimble spoke of difficulty in communication by the means previously used. In other letters, Mrs. Trimble said, the major said nothing was more important to American fighters

By dearest Sweetheart,

This is a new wrinkle in letter writing and I am told that you will have it in about a week. When you get this, if you get it, go to the Postmaster and inquire how to answer.

I still have no word from the States although I have looked everywhere for a cable or a letter. I cabled you some money last week and requested acknowledgment through the Bank here.

I am doing okay however have had a touch of the 'flu and its hard to get over.

The job I have is very interesting. I sincerely hope you have been well and that you are doing alright. Give my love to Helen and John and my regards to the others.

Keep this because it is of the first sent microfilm by the American Army,

WOMEN IN THE WAR

Careful Use, Sane Buying Make Linens Last

By Elizabeth McKee Boykin

There have been some effective protests by various organizations as to the long-range wisdom of taking women into war work outside their homes. These protests point to the fact that the men of America have the "brains and brawn" (the skill and talent) to win this war, and that taking women away from their families, no matter how many millions are spent on streamlined nurseries, will do as much as the enemy to defeat the cause for which our men are fighting, which is the maintenance of our way of life.

Well, we can see two sides to the question of how women should be used in the war effort. All American women, whether they work in or out of their homes, want to contribute everything possible toward the victory. Certain it is, however, that there is a lot of false glamour in the lure of certain types of war work, and that for most family women their war energies will best go into the big job of holding things together at home, of conserving and salvaging and helping with the different war organizations that have neighborhood workrooms or parcel out home work.

A United Effort

The greatest dent women will make in the war effort will be in conservation and salvage, in making things last longer, in working out substitutes for vital materials. One specific place where we can watch out for wear is with our sheets and pillow cases. America uses an awful lot of them, so that a united effort to guard them would really make a difference. Remember that the big mills that usually make sheets are now busy on war orders.

Thread count, tensile strength and smooth, tight, flat weave determine wearing qualities of sheets. All sheets have some sizing when new because this sizing protects the yarns in the weaving process. But too much denotes cheap, loose weaves. Never buy sheets that have enough sizing to powder off when you rub parts of the fabric together. The salvage should be finely woven with a gradually tapered weave from outer edge to body of sheet. The hems should be well tailored with small stitches securely caught, and finished smoothly, neatly and never puckered. The sheets should be torn to proper sizes; cut sizes won't keep their shape after laundering.

As to quantity, buy only what you need, but remember that it isn't good economy to overwork and overwear an insufficient number. A good average is six sheets for each bed and three cases for each pillow. Replace as you go along rather than all at once.

What Size?

The right sizes in sheet and pillow cases make a lot of difference in wear. For cots or narrow daybeds not over 30 inches wide, use sheets that are 54 by 99 or 54 by 108 inches. For single beds not over 36 inches wide, use sheets 63 by 99 or 63 by 108 inches. For twin beds from 36 to 48 inches wide, use sheets that are 72 by 99 or 72 by 108 inches. For three-quarter beds from 48 to 57 inches wide, use sheets 72 by 99 or 72 by 106 or 81 by 108 inches. For double beds from 57 to 66 inches, use sheets 81 by 99 or 81 by 106 or 90 by 108 inches. Pillow cases should be at least 1 1/4 inches wider and 6 inches longer than the pillows.

Sheets should be long enough for a secure tuck-in at the bottom and at least 20 inches of blanket-protecting turn-back at the top. For adults, the 108-inch length is best. Children can use shorter sheets because they sleep farther down in the bed. Don't buy sheets that are too wide, because the turned-under sides merely wear out from abrasion under the mattress.

Causes of Wear

Main causes of unnecessary sheet wear are: Constant, uneven use causes upper half of sheet to wear out faster than the lower half; counteract this by reversing sheet regularly, using bottom hem at top part of the time. Unprotected springs and spring ends and rough or splintery parts of bed start a break. Watch this and smooth rough places and cover angles of springs with gummed paper or adhesive tape. Open, unboxed springs often catch sheets; so it is a good idea to have a heavy cloth covering for springs. Rough mattress ticking sometimes has an abrasive action on sheets; overcome this by using a mattress pad or mattress cover. Jerking sheets off bed often causes tears; instead, loosen edges all around before stripping bed.

Cooked Shrimp

Cooked shrimps perched atop stuffed, hard-cooked eggs combine nutrition with variety. Serve the foods on a platter of chilled cress or shredded lettuce and pass salad dressing. Canned shrimps will do if fresh ones are out. Chill canned shrimps until ready to use, then remove from can and wash in cold water.

Whip Consensed Milk

Condensed milk (undiluted) will whip if it is thoroughly chilled. Keep several cans in the coldest part of the refrigerator to use as needed. Also have the bowl used for beating and the beater well chilled. If the milk does not whip quickly return to the refrigerator for 30 minutes.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Modern Mother Loses No Time Getting Back in Shape

Women in general are beginning to be as prompt as the screen stars about getting back in shape after the baby's arrival. They are in a hurry to go back to their jobs and as soon as the doctor gives the word, they start special calisthenics.

You have to get your doctor's permission, of course, but it is not unusual to take very mild exercise the day after the baby arrives. It's exercise merely to lie on your back and raise your head from the bed several times. Or, roll over and lie face downward for half an hour. When you do this, you should have a pillow under the chest to protect the breasts.

On the third day, you should be able to stretch your arms up overhead on the bed and lower down at sides. Repeat from two to six times, depending on your strength—and don't overdo!

If your case is normal and your doctor approves, you may increase your exercise slightly along toward the latter part of the second week. For example: Flex knees, rest feet on bed, and pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles as you raise the arms overhead on bed. Hold for a second, then lower arms to sides as you relax the abdominal muscles.

By the third week, you may be equal to fairly active calisthenics. From the knee-flexed position just described, draw alternate knees up toward chest until thigh rests on abdomen. As the right knee is drawn up, the left foot should continue to rest on bed. Perform slowly and don't overestimate your strength. Six to eight times will be plenty.

From the same knee-flexed position, raise feet clear of bed. First, hold knees together, then slowly separate as widely as comfortable. Hold, then bring together. Six times for this one.

Then bend the left knee put to side, leg on bed, and place foot on right leg near ankle. Slowly draw left foot up right leg until close to knee, then slide back down. Continue for three counts, then rest. Repeat with other foot.

This is the one time in your life that exercise is a downright necessity. Nature is not going to take care of toning and shortening those stretched muscles. You have to do that for yourself. But the amount of exercise you will have to take to get into shape depends mainly on how good you were about exercising long before you started to have a baby. The lazier you were then, the harder you will have to work now. Copyright, 1942—King Features Syndicate.

To recondition stretched abdominal muscles, mild exercises may be taken soon after the baby comes—provided the doctor gives his permission. In the exercises illustrated lie on back with feet elevated and bend alternate knees to chest.

Here's another exercise to be done after the baby arrives. In this you lie on the side and slowly raise and lower the upper leg.

From Dragon-Land—

Chungking, China, to be exact, has come Lauchlin Currie, after completing a mission as President Roosevelt's special representative. Above he is shown with Brig. Gen. Claire Chennault standing before one of the A. V. G.'s fighter planes. At right he confers with Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell

No More—

Lauchlin Currie Has Seen Enough
Of Sunrises on Trip to China

By Patricia Grady

"I never want to see a sunrise again." Lauchlin Currie has good reason for forsaking all such early morning vistas after his flying trip to China and back, when 2 o'clock risings were the order of the plane day. But the President's special assistant does admit that, sunrise or sunset, the horizons from the guest cottage of the Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, where he stayed during his recent sojourn in Chungking, were unsurpassedly beautiful.

Arriving in Washington on Friday, Mr. Currie had reason to be pleased with his trip, the purpose of which was to confer with the generalissimo as personal representative of the President. In Chungking last year to help the Chinese work out plans for solidifying their financial structure, Mr. Currie had the pleasure of seeing many of his recommendations in practice—and successful practice—on his return.

Chungking Still Blackened and Battered

"China is just as resolute as ever," reports this White House reporter. "They are tired and a little deflated but utterly steadfast in their determination to thrust out the aggressors. Their deflation is understandable. The Chinese had felt that once America entered the war, the Japanese forces would be shattered and their own country would be free. Like America, China had not counted on Pearl Harbor."

Battered and blackened Chungking has not changed much since Mr. Currie's last visit. In fact, it has not had a chance to recover from the ravages of bombings since the A. V. G. was incorporated into the United States Air Forces and has moved its headquarters to Chungking. In explanation of large forces of Japanese bombers and pursuit planes turning tail and running when a few of Brig. Gen. Claire Chennault's boys took to the skies in their small planes, Mr. Currie suggests that the Japanese pilots are suffering from a "Chennault mental hazard."

"And well they might," continues the returned traveler as he lauds the leadership and ingenuity of this American air genius. "His minimum requirement," comments Mr. Currie, "is that he stay at least one step ahead of the Japanese."

Withheld Fire During His Visit

Last year during our peace-time relations with the Rising Sun Empire, the Japanese graciously sent word that during the course of Mr. Currie's visit to Chungking—out of deference to the President's representative—there would be no further bombings of the wartime Chinese capital. The then-politic Japanese, bent on ingratiating themselves with an American government becoming more and more aroused at the ruthless aggression in China, kept their word. Two days after Mr. Currie left on his return trip to Washington, the bombings started again.

For other reasons than bomber protection the Chinese wanted Mr. Currie to stay on in Chungking. Though before his trip to the Orient last year, Mr. Currie's main knowledge of China came from "The Good Earth," during his two visits there he has become well versed in the problems of the Chinese. His understanding of their viewpoints can well be measured by the closeness of his friendship with the Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

"Of course I am entranced by her," says Mr. Currie of Mme. Chiang, "and I am deeply appreciative of his greatness."

Thinks Chinese Robes "Sensible"

Care to join a sartorial movement? Lauchlin Currie is starting one in the Capital. After wearing Chinese robes for the formal occasions of his recent visit, he thinks that they are more sensible and decorative than anything the West has devised in men's fashions.

Back at his desk in Washington, this Nova Scotian-born economist has no further plans for hopping continents. One of the President's "anonymous" advisers—his "passion for anonymity" is a reporter's problem—Mr. Currie has a long academic background behind him as a professor of international economics at Harvard and other Eastern colleges. After serving as assistant director of research and statistics for the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, he was appointed to his present post in 1938.

'On the Fly'—

War Work Done, Says Betty Furness

"We have to do our war work on the fly." Betty Furness, leading lady of the "My Sister Eileen" company, explains how she and her theatrical confreres make their contribution to the war effort. "We give blood, sell bonds—buy them, too, of course—and give benefit performances," avers this capable actress who forsook a promising Hollywood career for legitimate theater experience. "When you're traveling from city to city it is impossible to do war work in the home-town sense—that is, take courses in first aid, motor corps, and the things that most people are doing these days. So we do everything we can think of to do as we go."

On tour for a number of months—this is the second circuit of the company through the major Eastern cities—Miss Furness has had a chance to form a committee-of-one Gallup Poll on the war effort. "As one would expect," says she, "Washington is more war-conscious than any city we have been in. Here at the hub of the direction of war planning, it is only to be expected that people are acutely conscious of our present and future problems. Unfortunately, such realization is not nearly so acute in many of the cities where we have played."

In Boston—the only city where the company played for a number of weeks—performances exclusively and gratuitously for servicemen were staged. In every city, a large group of servicemen are asked to join the audience every evening. "They are a wonderful audience." Miss Furness echoes the sentiment of all performers about the enthusiasm and appreciation of the men in uniform.

Officiating at bond-selling rallies is one of Miss Furness' main wartime occupations. And radio appeals to potential bond buyers is another of her fortes. A model for John Powers at 15 years of age, Miss Furness was offered a screen test and spent six years in Hollywood before the cameras. With her reputation established as a leading lady of physical and emotive merit, Miss Furness decided that before she could join the ranks of the Dosses and Bernhardt, she should have "live audience" experience. So it was back to New York and a series of parts in Broadway shows, ending up with "My Sister Eileen"—she is the "My" of the title—and a tour so successful that it required a return engagement in every city it played.

"We have six or eight more weeks of tour," replied Miss Furness when asked what her plans are. "Then I'll go back to New York and look for a part in a play." You won't have to look far, Miss Furness.

New Worlds—

Now, as Never Before, Women Find All Kinds of Jobs Are Opening for Them

New and exciting avenues of endeavor are opening to women as a result of the war. Now as never before, women find their sex an asset in obtaining jobs heretofore reserved for men, and from all parts of the world comes news of them as they pursue their new and interesting work.

In New York, no fewer than a thousand women are being trained in the art of sending and receiving radio messages in International Morse Code. When they receive their licenses most of these students will enter the War Emergency Radio Service, while others hope to serve as professionals in one of the national communications agencies. It will not be long before every control center in New York's Civilian Defense Organization will have a 24-hour volunteer service from licensed radio operators who can handle messages by short wave in case local telephone wires are out of commission.

At least one mine in Colorado is using women to fill job vacancies caused by men going into the Army or more lucrative employment. Six women have been hired by the London Mines & Milling Co. in Alma. Their job is to sort out rock from crushed gold and silver ore carried along on a conveyor belt.

Thousands of girls, working among high explosives in the Royal Ordnance Factory in England were filled with dismay when they discovered their faces turning yellow. Sir David Munro, chief medical officer to the Ministry of Supply, and his staff set to work to find a remedy and a heavy coating of cosmetics was found to be the preventive agent.

As a result, the factories now abound in beauty parlors and luxury ablution rooms. Feminine workers who put explosives into bombs and detonator caps, must first make up their faces as carefully as though they were going to her wedding instead of to her work.

The laundry industry is preparing to meet a wartime shortage of men capable of holding down supervisory positions by appealing for more women students to enter the school of laundry management of the American Institute of Laundering. Training at the school, which opens in Joliet, Ill., on September 8, includes courses in power-plant techniques, plant production and textiles and washroom procedure.

And from London comes word that women, because of the great part being played by their sex in the war effort, feel they should be present at the Peace Conference.

Lalla Harrison Leaving Soon For Fort Sill, Oklahoma

Once in a great while Army orders work out conveniently—for a few persons involved. Lieut. L. Gwynne Taylor of Middleburg has been ordered away from Fort Sill, Okla., where he has been living with Mrs. Taylor and their daughter, so Capt. Clarence Dodge, who will be married on September 3 to Miss Lalla Harrison, has taken over the Taylor's home near Fort Sill. And it is there that the Dodges will make their home. Meanwhile, Mrs. Taylor and her daughter, Polly Ann, are expected shortly in Middleburg, Va., for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Poindexter Montague.

Senora de Somoza Leaving Today

Senora de Somoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua, and her daughter, Senorita Lillian Somoza, will leave here today for New York where they will be until Sunday when they will go to Miami, en route to their homeland. They have been in this country since early spring. On Monday afternoon Senora de Somoza and her daughter were received at the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt. Accompanying them to the Executive Mansion was Senora de De Bayle, who with the Minister of Nicaragua have been hosts to Senora de Somoza for the past week at the Legation.

Mrs. Wallace Will Christen New Battleship

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, and their daughter Jean left yesterday for New York to be on hand today when the largest battleship yet built will slip down the ways at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

It is Mrs. Wallace, a native of Iowa, who will crack the bottle of champagne over the prow of the new ship which is to bear the name, Iowa. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt plans to be on hand for the christening and Miss Wallace will serve as maid of honor. Martin at the launching will be Mrs. James D. Le Cron of this city.

Five other sister ships are under way, New Jersey, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois and Kentucky.

An official dinner that later developed into an informal Pacific war council took place last night at the White House when the President was host in honor of Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand.

Six Cabinet members, five envoys, Army and Navy chiefs and top-ranking representatives from Capitol Hill were in the company assembled at the Executive Mansion to meet the latest dignitary to arrive in Washington.

Early yesterday morning there were rumors that the event might be postponed because of the death of the Duke of Kent, but when due consideration was given to the fact that the Prime Minister faces a crowded schedule for the few days he is to spend in Washington it was decided not advisable to delay the dinner at which he would have an opportunity to meet at one event virtually all of the men with whom he is to confer here.

Ambassador Grew Among Guests

Among the guests were Joseph Grew, United States Ambassador to Japan, who arrived in Washington yesterday, and the United States Minister to New Zealand, Col. Patrick J. Hurley, who accompanied Prime Minister Fraser to the Capital.

Others in the company were Chinese Foreign Minister T. V.

PRIME MINISTER FRASER

Soong, Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador; Manuel Quezon, Philippine President; Secretary of State Hull, South African Minister Ralph Close, New Zealand Minister Walter Nash, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Attorney General Biddle, Navy Secretary Knox, Agriculture Secretary Wickard and Commerce Secretary Jones.

From the Senate came McNary, Barkley and Connally and from the House of Representatives, Bloom and Easton. Still others at the dinner were Undersecretary of State Welles, Undersecretary of War Patterson, the Netherlands Minister, Baron van Boetzelaer; the Canadian Charge d'Affaires, L. B. Pearson; Admiral William D. Leahy, Gen. George Marshall, Admiral Ernest J. King, Admiral Thomas Holcomb and WPB Chief Donald Nelson.

Also, Harry Hopkins, George T. Summerlin, Elmer Davis, Byron Price, Capt. John L. McCrae and the three members of the Prime Minister's official party—C. A. Berendsen, B. C. Ashwin and A. D. McIntosh.

Moving Today To Blair House

In keeping with the wartime pattern for entertaining official visitors, the calendar planned for New Zealand's Prime Minister began with tea at the White House yesterday afternoon and will continue today with a series of official conferences and a change of lodging. A White House guest last night, he will move across the street to Blair House this morning and will be there for the remainder of his visit.

Plans for a garden party in his honor at the New Zealand Legation are being held in abeyance.

There is a chance that the party will be canceled entirely because of the death of the Duke of Kent. There will be an informal dinner at the legation for the Prime Minister, however. Other items on his Capital calendar will be announced in detail later.

Oratorical Flair Shown Early

More pointers on Peter Fraser: Guests at last night's White House dinner found in the honor guest a man who expresses his ideas fluently, with a slight Scotch burr and a sense of humor very much like that of Minister Nash. Fraser's flair for oratory got off to a good start when he was but a small boy.

One day in Hyde Park he heckled a soap-box speaker so effectively that the latter stepped down off his perch in disgust and challenged Fraser to make the speech himself. He did—with great success. . . . In 1910 when he was 28 years old he went to New Zealand and took a job as a dockside worker.

Soon thereafter Fraser associated himself with the Labor Party and was making speeches far and wide again. Not without some difficulty, however; for on numerous occasions he was confronted with vocal opposition from members of his audience. In one instance, when he was advising a group of workmen in regard to a political trend, one man cried: "What do you know about us? You've never done a day's work in your life!" . . . But that was one accusation against which Fraser did not have to defend himself, for immediately another man replied, "The first time I saw him he was shoveling clay from the bottom of a trench."

Col. Kirkpatrick On Brief Leave

Visiting his Warrenton home on leave from duty in the Air Corps, Lieut. Col. Richard J. Kirkpatrick was among guests at a dinner given a few evenings ago by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tartere at their home near Middleburg.

Others at the dinner were Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Lieut. Col. Oliver Sands, U. S. A., and Mrs. Sands who motored down to Virginia this week for a few days visit with Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith at their home, Featherbed Farm.

Lost a Wife?

If You're an Army Man, and This Is Your Problem—Consult 'The Locators'

If, in the course of Army life, you have lost track of your wife, the girls to give you the dope on her present address are the Locators in Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

The Locators came into being last February through an idea of Mrs. Charles R. Bathurst, wife of Col. Bathurst of Fort Leavenworth. Gathering a group of Army wives around her, she reasoned:

"Look, officers are shifted so far and wide these days and on such instant notice that the addresses of their wives, if the latter moves, often get lost in the shuffle. Why don't we try to establish an up-to-the-minute file of those addresses, hunt up missing ones, etc? Then we could be a clearing center and supply them to husbands, relatives and friends."

Washington authorities approved and so the Locators, 50 officers' wives strong, set up headquarters and got to work. The result of their labors is illustrated in the case of a certain Army major who returned unexpectedly to this country from Burma. His mail had not caught up with him for weeks and in answer to a wire to his wife he received the following reply: "Addressee departed. Whereabouts unknown."

The man was frantic and told other officers his troubles. "Try the Locators in Fort Leavenworth," they advised him. He did just that and within 24 hours he was talking with his wife. She had moved and had written him of her moving, but he hadn't received her letter.

Hundreds of similar cases are being handled by the group. The businesslike headquarters at the fort has a roster of the present addresses of 6000 Army wives in all parts of the United States and the number is rapidly increasing. They have heard from American troops all over the world and they perform their services without charge. They do ask, however, say cannily, that "stamps for reimbursement of postage will be appreciated."

The Locators have chosen an insignia which they use on their stationery and will soon wear. It is that of a Locator, perched on a high stool over the center of the United States (roughly, Fort Leavenworth) with her eye glued to a spyglass that is trained on Hawaii.

Mrs. Martin to Return Soon

Mrs. Grinnell Martin, who is now visiting in New York, will return to Washington within the next week to rejoin Major Martin, who is on active duty with the Army here.

The Martins, who make their home at 114 East Sixty-fifth Street in New York, are stopping at the Brighton Hotel here.

New York, Aug. 26.

EUGENE GRACE: When the Baruch-Conant fact-finding committee completes its check-up on the rubber situation, it will turn next to steel . . . ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE: Isn't it true that your department soon will indict an important copper company for alleged war frauds?

DIEGO RIVERA: Those famed murals you once made for Rockefeller Center, which were removed because the management objected to some of the figures represented in them, were not destroyed. They now decorate the lobby of Unity House—the summer vacation place operated by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

CLARE BOOTH: DEAN ALFANGE: Jim Bennett will try to see the President about getting an endorsement of his candidacy. New Dealers are warring that it can't be done . . . NAACP: For the first time in its history the State Department in Washington soon will start using Negro secretaries and stenographers . . . REPRESENTATIVE CLARE HOFFMAN: A fund is being raised for the defense of the 23 indicted by the Federal Grand Jury. Joseph V. Kamp of the Constitution Educational League is raising the fund with a booklet he calls "Maloney's Moscow Trials." He refers to William F. Maloney, the prosecutor who'll try the 23 defendants jointly in mid-October.

SAM GOLDWYN: Maj. Jack Lawrence, your former press-agent, participated in the Dieppe raid . . . VARIETY: After his appearance on "Information Please" Friday night, the show-wise Leon Henderson appraised his own performance. He confessed to FPA: "Corny—but still go good in the sticks" . . . WILLIAM SAROYAN: Canada Lee, star of your recent play, seems to appear next in Selden Rodman's play, "The Revolutionists," which will be premiered in Haiti . . . CLARE BOOTH: Are you going to do commentating for WQXR, the station in which Time, Inc., recently acquired an interest? . . . LOCAL 802: Two name-bands will be disbanded soon. The leaders are being drafted.

JOSEPH CLARK BALDWIN: Dean Alfange, the A. L. P.'s nominee for governor, could have had a Democratic nomination—to run for Congress against you. But Alfange, who lost to you last year, turned it down, explaining, "Baldwin's record is a good one. He voted the way I'd have voted. So I can't oppose him" . . . JOE DAVIES: Erskine Caldwell, who is adopting your "Mission to Moscow," is coming East to register for the elections. This will be the first time he's voting. And so Caldwell, author of "Tobacco Road" and 17 other books, will have to take a literacy test . . . OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB: Linton Wells, the commentator, is off to Africa.

THIRTEENTH INFANTRY: The Mrs. Davis who opened her Southampton, Long Island, home last month as a canteen for the 13th Infantry, is Gary Cooper's mother-in-law. The whole house is theirs for cards, reading, loafing, sandwiches, etc. . . . JOHN FORD: Your Midway Island battle-movie will be released for Navy Relief.

JIM FARLEY: Don't bet against Governor Lehman's resigning before his term of office expires. Lehman is expected to be called to Washington shortly . . . NOEL COWARD: Phyllis Joyce, the British girl now appearing in your "Blithe Spirit," is returning to England soon. She's going back to join the WAAC's . . . MAJOR GENERAL SURLLES: Col. Onete Cady Hobby saw Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" last night. Berlin introduced her to the cast backstage: "I want you to meet the lead WAAC" . . . The cast, who soon will start the road tour, were reminded by Sgt. Ezra Stone: "And after we finish the tour, then we really go on the road—the Burma Road."

ANN CORIO: ALTHOUGH your preview of "Jungle Siren" is limited to uniform men, and critics have been barred, one movie critic will be there. Sgt. Bill Davidson, who'll see the review, is the movie critic for "Yank" . . . EQUITY: While hundreds of ticket-purchasers waited in line to buy seats for "This Is the Army," behind the closed doors the strangest show ever presented in the history of the theater was taking place onstage. It's a military secret . . . ALFRED HITCHCOCK: William Shirer's title for his new play is being changed. Shirer, who's been away, never had known of the movie in which you used that title—"Foreign Correspondent."

Trend-Maker Is Up to Old Tricks After 35 Years in the Studios

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Aug. 26.

When Allan Dwan last year undertook to pluck Fibber McGee & Molly from the air lanes, co-star them in a picture with Edgar Bergen & Charlie McCarthy, it is no Hollywood secret that he got quite an advance rousing around.

For what he planned was something never before done. So, there were plenty to say it shouldn't be done, for that is the way in the movies, just as with the rest of the world.

But the resultant movie, "Look Who's Laughing," proved to be one of the biggest money-makers on the RKO-Radio schedule. It was joyously acclaimed by a public, 43 millions of whom by tabulated count are accustomed to lend their ears to Fibber and Molly and to enjoy the verbal sparrings of Bergen and his little woodenhead.

Such popularity, of course, calls for a second helping. So, now he is producing his quartette once more. This time he calls it "Here We Go Again."

More, Dwan's success recalled to Hollywood that he is a trend-maker. This is a very limited company. It calls for the ability to forecast what tide in movie entertainment the paying public will fancy. That is something pretty rare.

Some of the Famous: David Wark Griffith was a trend-picker, one of the first, if not the first, to foresee the public would cotton to melodrama sugar-coated in lofty sentiments.

Another was Mack Sennett, whose prophetic vision saw the public gazing at lovely legs and rolling in the aisles when the other fellow got a pie in the face.

As for Charlie Chaplin, he made fame and fortune through forecasting that the world would laugh cruelly (self-consciously) at a hapless little fellow in baggy pants forever getting shoved around—all because he embodies the Forgotten Man in us all.

There was Bryan (Brynie) Foy who had the nose for news of a great editor and for years over at Warners made pictures out of the page-one gist of the world.

There is Cecil B. De Mille, still going strong, who early saw the public would pay to look at the coarsely ornate denied to most in average lives, and so set a trend he has been following these 28 years past.

Even that record as a trend picker, however, goes down before Allan Dwan's, for he has been in there picking trends for all of 35 years.

He even may be said to have picked the trend toward movie raids, for many years thereafter prevalent among the warring movie moguls of Hollywood before peace descended.

Thirty-odd years ago, when losing his job of scenario editor at the old American Film Co., he turned to the late "Uncle" Carl Laemmle. Later he turned to have brought under his banner the then great stars of American film, Warren Kerrigan and Wally Reid, together with all their player associates.

Here's what they are paid," said Dwan. "Offer them double and see what happens."

He was empowered to do so. Whereupon, the offer was snapped up, the stars and their fellow players changed allegiance. American Film Co. plant, known as the "Flying A," went back to an ostrich farm until a new player roster could be built.

THE PRINCIPALS IN "MRS. MINIVER"

A love story of rare dignity and beauty is told in a most compelling manner in "Intermezzo," which is given a revival showing at the Little this week. The story of a man who errs against his wife and family is one of almost daily occurrence, but through the medium of an expertly written script, as well as some fine acting and intelligent direction, the picture rises far above the average triangle yarn.

The story centers in a concert violinist who wears of his life as a public performer. The plaudits of his audience have no longer any meaning for him. Actually he loves his wife and children and they in turn adore the father, but the appearance of a young, beautiful girl in his life causes him to forsake his family for his love for her. In her he finds the satisfaction and confidence that his work had ceased to give him.

The problem is an old one and much simpler than it appears on the surface. A man rapidly approaching middle-age, who needs reassurance that he is still young, he attempts to solve it by turning to another love. The usual solution can be found in the affection of a daughter for her father, and so it is in this case. An accident to his beloved "Ann Marie" shocks him to the realization of his act and returns him to his family.

Leslie Howard gives an excellent performance as the violinist, with Ingrid Bergman in the role that brought her to the full attention of Hollywood as the young girl who becomes enamored of the older man. Edna Best is seen as the wife with John Halliday as a friend.

One Actor Collects Noted Photographs

Bramwell Fletcher, who has reversed the Hollywood procedure by collecting instead of giving out autographed pictures, this week added to his unusual collection his first picture of a movie star. It was a personally autographed photo of Hedy Lamarr, in her "Tortilla Flat," as she appears in "White Cargo."

When the picture completed shooting, he asked Hedy for the photo and promptly received it. Fletcher's collection includes pictures of many of the world's outstanding personalities. His prize one is of Franklin D. Roosevelt, given him by the President in 1939.

New Tanks Thrill Girl Reporters

Battered and Bruised After Ride in New Model, Women Vote Machine 'Awe Inspiring'

By Amy Porter

Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago, Aug. 26.—In a moment of recklessness today, 15 newspaper women took a rollicking ride in the swiftest, toughest, deadliest tank yet produced anywhere in the world.

That's how we heard it described by the men who make it at the nearby Hammond, Ind., plant of the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co.

After a 15-minute ride we ok'd the description, emerging with runs in our stockings, paint on our clothes, and a dreadful sense of claustrophobia, engendered the moment they closed up the turret, sealing in four people where there obviously wasn't comfortable room for one.

"Did you get a kick out of it?" Lou Wulff, superintendent of ordnance production, asked one woman reporter.

"I got several kicks," she said, nursing bruises here and there about her person.

Nevertheless, this tank is one of the most awe-inspiring things we have seen on the National Association of Manufacturers tour of war industries.

This tank—the generic term is "General Lee," and the pet name the test drivers had given the one we rode in is "Daisy Mae"—is a superduper of a tank with an easy speed of 40 miles per hour, a great big 75mm. gun which can swing around in a full circle, blasting away at the enemy in all directions at once, practically, and a lot of little guns scattered here and there about her. The men who make and drive them always refer to a tank as she.

Wulff bemoaned the fact that his plant was turning out only three times as many tanks as the company had contracted for.

"We could do much, much better, if only we had the materials," he said.

The Hammond plant also produces 105 mm. field howitzers with a 12-mile range, a 67-pound projectile. Still another proud product at Hammond is the 81 mm. trench mortar.

James Cole, general superintendent, observed that July production was up 20 per cent over June, adding:

"But you mustn't forget that just five and a half months ago this was a deserted building."

Another Star We'll Be Seeing

ANN RUTHERFORD, young screen beauty, is ready for her trip to Washington to join other film folk in front of the Treasury, where the movie bond show, "Stars Over America," will have its premiere Monday. The show will start at 11:30 a. m. and continue until 2 p. m.

New Jersey Women Organize Kitchen Brigade, Use School To Can Products for 'Food Bank' During War Emergency

By Corinne Hardesty

United Press Staff Correspondent

Long Branch, N. J., Aug. 27.—A kitchen brigade of some 200 women, many of whom never before held a paring knife, today peeled tomatoes and scraped carrots for a "food bank" to defeat Hitler's bombers.

Mrs. H. J. Curtis, member of the Civilian Defense Council and chairman of the American Women's Voluntary Services, whose nimble mind conceived the project, considered a model for other communities, explained how it worked.

School Kitchen Used

Small, snappy-eyed, clad in a crisp blue dirndl, she stood in the huge high school kitchen among 15 women peeling tomatoes. Others stirred the contents of kettles, sterilized jars or sealed the filled containers.

Efforts of the canners brigade have resulted in 3000 quarts of fruit and vegetables stored "against a rainy day," all from contributed effort and materials.

"I hope I never see a vegetable again," said Mrs. Joseph Saka, a summer resident, as she energetically scraped carrots for the four freedoms.

Mrs. Curtis pointed out, gesturing with a paring knife, that Long Branch, a Jersey shore point closely exposed to bombs should enemy planes appear in the vicinity, was once a dreamy resort with a few factories and 16,000 people.

Population Doubled

Since December 7 it has swelled to 30,000, many of the newcomers workers in new airplane and parachute factories.

"A survey showed that in any emergency we would be short of food," Mrs. Curtis said. "We are a likely center for evacuees from nearby points because of road and railway connections. We might have 8000 or 10,000 people dumped in our lap."

"The 'food bank' would keep us from starving until outside help can come."

A canvass of large gardens, many of them dating to the lavish resort era, showed 52 with surpluses which otherwise would be wasted.

"So we had our fruits and vegetables, and plenty of volunteer labor," Mrs. Curtis said.

Mrs. Curtis said one of the most valuable donations, which included pots, pans, spoons, knives, rubber rings, soap, towels, strainers and dishpans from local merchants, was a cooking expert loaned by the utility company.

"She laid down the law before any of us could advance our pet canning theories," Mrs. Curtis said. "It saved a lot of hair pulling."

Jap Ruse Based On Similarity of Zero to U.S. P-40

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Japanese took advantage of the similarity between their Zero fighters and American P-40 pursuit planes to work another ruse during the raid on Dutch Harbor, John W. Fletcher, Mayor of Unalaska, said today.

United States defense forces had been spraying antiaircraft fire among the attacking planes when observers saw what appeared to be a furious dogfight among seven planes over the harbor.

When land-based fire ceased to await the outcome of the sky fighters' snarl, three big Jap bombers swept in over the harbor to drop their bombs, Mayor Fletcher said in an interview, and then were joined by all seven fighter planes as escort when they headed back to sea.

U. S. Cargo Vessel, Dutch Ship Sunk In Gulf Waters

By The United Press

The Navy Department broke a 6-day silence in which it had disclosed no new sinkings by enemy action in the western Atlantic area to announce yesterday the loss of two United Nations merchant ships, with five men dead or missing. It was the first announcement of a sinking since August 20, although Brazilian dispatches August 24 announced the U. S. tanker Louisiana had been sunk.

A torpedo sank a small Dutch merchantman in the Gulf of Mexico about 10 days ago, it was revealed, and a submarine torpedoed and shelled a medium-sized U. S. merchant ship in the Gulf of Mexico early this month.

One man was killed and four were missing from the crew of the Dutch ship, but all 23 crew members who escaped suffered burns when the ship burst into flame after the torpedo hit, survivors said at a Gulf Coast port.

TRANSITADS (car cards) a bigger advertising VALUE!

Why? Because, in the three years since war started, 130,000 new families have come to Washington to help win it. Because every new family setting up a household requires most if not all of the goods and services offered by Washington merchants. Because these new families use the street cars and buses. Washington has 80% more vehicles than in 1939; 8% more people per day ride each one; total Transitads circulation increases closely parallel population change.

Washington is an important city to the world. Its people do important work. They must be—they are—alive, alert, progressive. They can be the best of all customers—substantial, steadily employed, steady buyers. The great majority can be reached through Transitads in the cars and buses. Circulation per month now totals 35 million rides, an average of 4.5 rides per family per day!

When every day, continuous contact with these important people can be had for so low a cost; when your message can be placed before them in dominant 11x28" size, in full color, lighted, at night; when your advertisement can be seen for 15 to 20 minutes just before the customer leaves the car in the shopping district or near a store; when all this can be bought for the amazing low cost of less than 5c per thousand circulation—why not look into it at once? These are the reasons why so many alert Washington advertisers, so many national advertisers, so many Washington advertising agencies have done so with profitable results. For the whole story.

Rich Girl-Poor Girl

SYNOPSIS

Rather than take over his late father's practice and bank in the latter's glory, young Dr. Jonathan Kimber wants to make his own way in the world. He visits Dr. Alan Ballard, his friend, in the little town of Riverport, to ascertain if the old physician needs an assistant. As luck would have it, the aged doctor is planning to retire to California and offers Jonathan his place. Dr. Ballard warns the newcomer not to tread on the toes of former State Senator Sutton who practically runs the town. Jonathan is to take over in Riverport, the fussy old housekeeper, must be kept on as the old doctor had promised her a home as long as she lives. Jonathan is sure he is going to like Riverport when he meets Rose Ward, the doctor's niece. As the young couple stroll through the park, Sally Sutton, ritz daughter of the Senator, rides past. Rose is surprised when the girl greets her, but credits it to the "new-man-in-town" influence.

CHAPTER IV

They crossed the park and came out on one of the wide tree-bordered streets. A car was parked nearby, a battered ancient car, and a large blond young man leaned from it in conversation with a policeman. Rose quickened her steps. "There's Bill Lynd," she said, "perhaps he'll give us a lift. After all, we can't walk all Uncle Alan's office hours."

Coming up to the car she said, "Hi, Bill, loading as usual? Want a couple of nonpaying fares?" She beamed at the uniformed officer and added, "Hello, Mel, how's Beth and the baby?"

"They're fine," replied the short, sandy-haired policeman, "wish you'd run down and see them some day."

"I shall... Mel, this is Dr. Kimber... Mel Hopson... and this strange object in the alleged car is Bill Lynd."

Jonathan shook hands with the two men. The policeman moved away and the blond giant opened the door. "You look pretty thin, doctor," he informed Jonathan, "and although Rose had put on weight."

"I have not," contradicted Rose indignantly, and slim as a willow. "Well, get in," said Bill Lynd amiably, "and I'll take you for a ride. The real estate business can get along without me for a little while."

He put the car in motion and they shot away from the curb. He asked thoughtfully, across Rose, "Weren't thinking of buying or renting in this neck of the woods, were you, doctor? If so I have six mansions on my hands, complete with stables... to say nothing of a couple of inferior hovels... attractive, reasonably priced homes, to you."

Rose said before Jonathan could answer. "Doctor Kimber is going to take Uncle Alan's house in the fall. He's coming here to practice."

"Good," said Bill heartily, "wish you luck, Doctor. Well, Rose, where'll it be?"

"Take us down the river road," suggested Rose, "it's the prettiest... unless the country club and the estates of the great."

"Listen to obey," said Bill Lynd gravely. "Hold your hats. Here we go."

A little later Rose remarked suddenly. "Sally Sutton and Phil Dexter were horseback riding through the Riverport Park—we saw them, they nearly ran over a child. I half a notion to tell Mel—after all, they can read, I suppose. There are plenty of signs there."

"Mel can read, too," answered Bill. "He knows better than to tell Sally Sutton where she can and where she can't ride. Didn't her old man put the park in the town's Christmas stocking, a while back?"

Jonathan laughed. He commented. "Bill and Rose Describe the Suttons"

"I haven't been here 12 hours and yet it seems to me that your city should be named Suttonport or something similar."

Bill chuckled. He said gravely, "The Senator would fancy it, at that. It just hasn't dawned on him. When you get up here you'll be living on Senator Street. It's a good thing to remember."

Rose said, "When we were in School together—us and Mel and I, Bill, remember how belligerent Mel was... Didn't he get the class vote for the most aggressive and the most likely to succeed? But I'll bet a cookie if I told him about Sally he would have run a mile."

"It's incredible," said Jonathan. He stretched his legs and slid an arm around the back of the seat for comfort. "A one-man town! Never heard of such a thing. Why doesn't somebody do something about it?"

"It has occurred to some of us," said Bill gravely, "but so far we haven't found the formula. Rose, have you heard that Red Dexter was kicked out of prep school last week?"

"No," said Rose, "what for?"

"I don't know. I can guess, however. That kid needs a horse whip and a severe lopping off of the allowance. I understand Mr. Dexter is taking him abroad. They're giving out he's had a nervous breakdown." Bill laughed shortly and turned the car into a dirt road running past fields across which Jonathan could see the river and the summer camps at the water's edge. "I hear he'll be back here for school next term."

Rose said thoughtfully, "That's too bad, in a way. I mean, he's certain to be something of a leader. He has a good athletic record and then he's been away so long." She turned to Jonathan apologetically. "I'm so sorry," she said, "nothing is more irritating than a conversation which leaves one a listener in the dark. You remember seeing the man who was riding with Sally Sutton—Phil Dexter...? It is rumored that he is engaged to her. His father and her were partners. Mr. Dexter still conducts the business and Phil is general manager. Red—whose Christian name is Lawrence—is Phil's younger brother."

Listen! with Glynn

This may be a painful jolt to your ideas of propriety, but we think you should know the truth.

"Death Valley Days," the realistically, drawlingly western dramatic series—all about old sordidness and seafaring cattle prospectors—you hear over WJWV every Thursday at 8 p. m. isn't written by a Westerner at all.

Where rustling and prospecting is strictly of a politer kind than that known in the great open spaces.

Her name is Ruth Cornwall Woodman and at the moment she lives in a well-documented suburb of New York called Rye. Prior to the advent of "Death Valley Days" on the radio, all she knew about the West was the stories told by her father, who was a mining engineer.

But all this doesn't mean that Ruth Cornwall Woodman doesn't know what she's writing about.

When in 1930, "Death Valley Days" decided to use that new medium of entertainment radio, to dramatize true stories of the West, Mrs. Woodman was an advertising copy writer and a graduate of Vassar.

But, given the job of writing the scripts, Mrs. Woodman went all in a most logical way. She went directly to Death Valley to gather the story material. She understood.

The series was to last only a year, but that proved slightly incorrect. The program is now in its twelfth year and ranks as the oldest half-hour dramatic show on the networks.

Since 1930, Mrs. Woodman has kept up the practice of making regular yearly trips to the Death Valley region, gathering the story material and checking on the facts in person. When the program was young, she confined the stories to Death Valley only, but in recent years she has spread her net over the surrounding country of Arizona, Utah, Texas and Nevada, and has even gone as far afield as Washington, California and Oregon.

"I've discovered," says Mrs. Woodman, "that the local newspaper editors, doctors, bartenders and librarians—if there is a library—are the best sources of story tips."

One "must" in every new town she visits is a thorough study of old newspaper files. She's a regular subscriber to such Western papers as The Tombstone Epitaph, the Irvin Register and the Arizona Highways magazine. All have given her permission to use anything they print.

Although it's quite a job, Mrs. Woodman keeps up a correspondence with everyone she has interviewed. Now that the program is so well established, too, people write in regularly giving suggestions for stories. She answers them all, then files them according to locality and follows them up on her next visit westward.

Mrs. Woodman is probably Vassar's only sordid prospect.

Contract Bridge

Mrs. J. C. R. submits a question on doubling with neither side vulnerable and South dealer:

South West North East
Pass Pass 10 Pass
Pass Pass 10 Pass
Pass Pass 10 Pass

"Then, fireworks," writes Mrs. J. C. R. "West claimed it was obligatory for East to mention a suit when partner doubled a one bid. East contended that his six diamonds would have sunk North's bid and made double good business. West contends a suit must be mentioned."

East may pass any information double by West, turning it into a business gamble. He does not have to mention a suit. Whether or not he had a good penalty pass in this case would depend upon his cards and Mrs. J. C. R. did not give us those.

Opening lead: 3 ♠.

Good players do not make take-out doubles void in the suit mentioned for just this reason. The chances are, when the doubler is void, his partner will have length in the suit and pass for penalties.

If West had a good hand, he should bid at once and not let himself be trapped in this fashion. Doubtless, he should bid a suit instead of doubling on the second round.

"Here's a little problem on defense," writes C. A. DeL., concerning today's hand. "Two better-than-average 'master' players were on the defending team."

West led a low trump, declarer then led the heart ace and discarded the seven of diamonds. The heart king followed, with a low club being discarded. Declarer then played the club three, up to his jack, which was covered by West's queen. At this stage the return of West's low club led the contract, but actually West led a low heart and the contract was made. East contended that the low club should have been led and set forth some very convincing reasons, so we now appeal to you to help us out again."

A low heart lead is unthinkable. This play lets declarer win the jack and discard a possible loser, a discard he could not arrange for himself.

The club lead is correct and logical, though probably only a thoughtful player would make it. It is almost certain South's hand is made up of clubs and spades, else why, after discarding one diamond on a high heart, would he lay off and discard a club?

It is possible, of course, that declarer has seven spades and five clubs, but in this case the contract could not be set. It is more probable that South's hand numbers six spades and six clubs, especially since East's play on the three of clubs was the nine. West is sure of three club tricks, come what may. It will do no harm to lead the five, and it may set the contract.

If West plays the club five, East will trump, then declarer will still have to lose more clubs, discarding three clubs and a club ruff in all four down one at four spades, doubled.

Incidentally, declarer's second play, pulling out the heart king for a club discard, was poor. It helped him not at all, ungarded the heart suit and showed plainly his distribution.

Farm Labor Union Planned by Lewis

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Herbert W. Voorhees of Hopewell, N. J., president of Free Farmers Incorporated, said tonight that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, would try soon to establish a union embracing all farm labor.

Speaking at a dinner held in connection with the convention of the Northeastern District of the Farmers Council, Voorhees said: "When Lewis feels the time is right in the next few weeks, and perhaps within 30 days, he will again break out in an organization drive in the five big dairy States of New York, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Washington."

CIO Council Urges Special Issue of Yule Gift Bonds

The Maryland-District of Columbia C. I. O. Council asked Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday to float a special issue of Christmas war stamps and bonds with the idea of eliminating commodities as Christmas gifts this year.

"It was our opinion," Secretary Morgenthau said, "that such a move would receive popular support because it would help the expenditure of millions of dollars for Christmas gifts and commodities and would instead divert it to Christmas war bonds, thus having an inflationary effect and helping the war effort."

Louisiana House May Dare Senate To Free-for-All

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 26 (AP)—The House of Representatives is considering during the State session a "one-round brawl, free-for-all, knock-down, drag-out battle royal."

Today a resolution declared Senators had "chips on their shoulders" and facetiously proposed the battle royal at the new State University football stadium, admission proceeds to go to the "widows of victims."

Dutch Ships Ready To Sail Again

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Dutch ships, tied up in American ports since August 18 by a labor dispute, are ready to sail again.

The International Transport Workers' Federation said today that an agreement on working conditions and postwar security for officers and seamen had been reached in London.

After being informed of the agreement, federation spokesmen said, the men involved had voted to sail "as usual."

Gypsy Rose Lee To Become Bride Of Actor Kirkland

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Gypsy Rose Lee, erstwhile queen of burlesque, sometimes mystery writer, and currently the star of a hit Broadway musical, surprised her friends with an announcement that she will be married Sunday night to Alexander Kirkland, actor.

Miss Lee, reached backstage as she was preparing for tonight's performance of "Star and Garter," said she would be wed to Kirkland, familiar to both Broadway and Hollywood, "at the stroke of midnight" Sunday at her home in Highland Mills, N. Y.

The queen of "distinguished" burlesque said she had met Kirkland six months ago through an introduction by Carl Van Doren, author and critic.

Miss Lee said she and Kirkland will spend the one-day honeymoon. They'll take as much of an auto trip on Monday as their gas ration will allow, she said.

It will be Miss Lee's second marriage. A year ago she was divorced from Robert Mitty, New York manufacturer of dental supplies.

Batt Asked to Use Closed Ship Plant

The special House subcommittee investigating cancellation of the Maritime Commission's contract with the Higgins Shipyard at New Orleans, La., yesterday urged William L. Batt, vice chairman of the WPB, to try to find some way to utilize the plant and salvage the Government's investment.

Chairman Peterson (Democrat) of Florida of the subcommittee announced the move after Batt testified at length before a closed session.

Peterson said Batt's testimony in his discussion of the over-all steel supply situation was essentially the same as that given last week by Rear Admiral H. L. Vickery, member of the Maritime Commission, who assumed full responsibility for the cancellation.

WAVES Will Use Coolidge Home

Northampton, Mass., Aug. 26 (AP)—Mrs. Grace Coolidge, widow of the late President, today announced she had made ready tonight to vacate her new $30,000 home which will be used as headquarters of the WAVES for the duration of the war.

"I couldn't let the house stand idle when it is needed so badly," the former First Lady said. She revealed she will live with a friend, Mrs. Florence B. Adams, across the street from her own home.
